THREE CENTS

Farm, Court, Job Inquiries Are Pressed By Congress

Committees Going West, South for Agricultural Program Data.

Ten Court Circuits Are to Be Studied

Byrnes to Survey British Unemployment Relief on Europe Trip.

By Robert C. Albright.

Reaching back to the grass roots for guidance on farm and judiciary issues and across the sea to Britain for hints on relief administration, three Congressional groups last night already were at grips with next session's most pressing problems.

Two roving subdivisions were assigned by the Senate Agriculture Committee to make flying tours of the West beginning September 30 and ending October 30, and of the South October 18 to 29. They will return to Washington in November to shape a delayed farm program.

Senate and House Judiciary subcommittees arranged to study dockets and conditions in each of the ten judicial circuits, looking for a permanent program next session to expedite justice and perfect measures for judiciary reform.

Byrnes Going to Europe.

Chairman James F. Byrnes, of a special Senate jobless relief committee, disclosed plans for a personal study of Great Britain's relief system, while his committee staff in Washington looks for a permanent solution of the relief problem. Byrnes will leave Thursday for the Interparliamentary Union meeting in Paris, and will go thence to London for his British unemployment survey.

Reports of a special session of Congress persisted, but Senators close to the President discounted the possibility of any such meeting before late November or early December. They said crop adjustment legislation, for which the session would be called, could not be adequately drafted before mid-November.

Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, House majority leader, shied clear of this subject in a radio speech last night outlining last session's accomplishments. But Speaker Bankhead, en route home, told the Associated Press in Birmingham, Ala., a special session "will doubtless be called about the first of November to consider the wage and hour bill, crop control, the 'little TVA' and other pending legislation."

Rayburn Defends Record.

Representative John E. Miller, Arkansas Democrat, following a White House visit, forecast a "clarifying statement" from the President in the next few days. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, another White House visitor, said he always had favored a special fall session to consider crop control.

Rayburn, in his radio speech last night, defended the past session's record and denied reports "that the President has lost his leadership over Congress, and that Congress is in a bad humor."

"Speaking for the House of Representatives, I deny these statements and repel the insinuation," Rayburn said. "I am glad that this vacation time has come in order that we may go back and feel the pulse of the people in our districts and our States. I do not believe the President has lost the friendly sympathy of Congress, and I feel certain that the overwhelming majority of the American people still look to him for leadership."

Rayburn listed as grist for the next session of Congress, Government

Guffey Seeks Peace, Plans Trip Abroad

Principal in Senate Row Wants to Get Away From Everything.

Protagonist of last season's worst outburst of Senate ill-feeling, Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Pennsylvania's Democratic "boss" and chairman of the Senate Democratic campaign committee, is planning a six weeks' tour of Europe to forget about it all.

"I want to get away from telephones, from legislation and from job-seekers," Guffey told a Post reporter last night.

It was Guffey's radio cry for the scalps of Democratic court plan opponents that loosened the Senate's adjournment torrent of party dissension and demands for his ouster as Senate Democratic campaign chairman.

Planned Trip Before Row.

Friends said Guffey planned his European vacation before his radio attack shattered harmony of the Senate's closing session. He will be accompanied by his sisters, Misses Ida and Pauletta.

The Pennsylvania Senator lunched yesterday with John L. Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O., and announced plans for a radio address in New York today summarizing labor's accomplishments in the Keystone State.

All inquiries on Guffey's status as Senate Democratic campaign chairman were referred to Senate Majority Leader Barkley, who announced Saturday that Guffey tendered his resignation as chairman a week before the radio address. Late yesterday Barkley had not yet formally accepted. Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, had collected 18 Senate signatures on a petition for his removal.

Trying to Still Waters.

Leaders last night were still trying to smooth over party dissension growing out of the Guffey Senate fracas.

Speaker Bankhead said in Birmingham, Ala.: "There will be no split in the Democratic Party."

Reports continued that Guffey plans to run for Governor of Pennsylvania next year and appoint Gov. George H. Earle to serve out his Senate term.

On his European tour Guffey and his sisters plan to visit Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., in Warsaw, and Ambassador William C. Bullitt in Paris. Biddle and Bullitt are Pennsylvanians. The Guffeys also will visit Ireland.

Abell to Follow Pearsons Around World to Get Son

London, Aug. 23 (AP)—A Washington newspaper columnist vowed tonight to fight a colleague "around the world" for custody of a five-year-old boy seized by his mother and her second husband after a surprise airplane trip to the Channel Islands.

The vacation court late today granted to Drew Pearson and his wife an order restraining George Abell, former husband of Mrs. Pearson, from attempting to obtain custody of the child, Tyler Abell. Both Pearson and Abell are Washington newspaper writers. The Pearsons are expected to sail for New York Wednesday.

"It is an outrageous act," Abell said. "I will follow the Pearsons around the world if necessary to obtain complete custody of my son."

Infant Abducted As Mother Shops

Chicago, Aug. 23 (AP)—Police said tonight Diane Lucas, 3-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Lucas, had been reported stolen from her baby carriage on the North Side. Mrs. Lucas, wife of a carpet layer of moderate circumstances, said the child was seized while she was shopping. She could offer no reason for the abduction.

Balky Autos Thwart 'March' Of Many Jobless on District

The reason more unemployed didn't "march" on Washington, it developed last night, was that their automobiles weren't working so well.

This explanation was made by Arnold Johnson, of Cleveland, one of the orators at a mass meeting last night of the Workers Alliance of America at the Belasco Theater. Johnson told of the hardships endured by many who journeyed here in their automobiles. He told how the owners had been fired from WPA, were not able to afford the needed repairs.

Leftists Make Frantic Rally At Santander

Hungry Citizens Fight Desperately to Repel Rebel Besiegers.

90,000 Foes Sweep Up Biscay Coast; British Vessel Bombed.

The War in Spain.

Loyalist defenders of Santander dug in for a last stand against 90,000 advancing insurgents.

Bombardment of a British freighter and a League of Nations protest charging Italy with waging war against loyalist Spain aroused fears of an international clash in the Mediterranean.

Loyalists Frantic.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish frontier, Aug. 23.—Shopkeepers, chauffeurs, mechanics and fishermen of hungry, desperate Santander rushed to defend their besieged city today.

Despite a series of government counterattacks, insurgents held a spearhead in the fortified ring southeast of Torrelavega, defense outpost of the city, which is the last government-occupied port on the North Spanish coast.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco's rebel legions held positions which only yesterday were inside the government's fortified defense lines. From these the insurgent big guns pounded defense works south of Torrelavega, where a unified army of Basques, Asturians and Santander militiamen dug in for a last stand.

In all, five insurgent columns of 90,000 troops drove forward to consolidate their control of the Biscayan coast.

The government defense ministry at Valencia said insurgent bombing planes had made shambles of Torrelavega and Arques de Igua on the Santander coast.

Loyalists Accuse Italy.

Paris, Aug. 23 (AP)—Bombardment of a British freighter, allegedly by two "Fascist" airplanes, and a League of Nations protest charging Italy with waging war against loyalist Spain aroused grave fears tonight of an international clash in the Mediterranean.

The 2,500-ton merchantman Noemijulia out of London reported in an SOS picked up at Marseilles that "we are being bombarded by two planes marked by white crosses in the middle of black circles off the Catalan Coast."

France and Great Britain have sent their mightiest warships into the troubled sea with instructions to shell and sink any "pirates"—either warships or submarines—attacking their merchant ships.

Navy Plane Falls; 6 Reported Dead

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 23 (AP)—A giant Navy flying boat, returning from a routine night flight, crashed in San Diego Bay tonight.

By the Associated Press. Five of eight men aboard were believed to be still in the submerged ship. Sailors removed the other three from the plane, one unidentified. The other two were T. P. Dougherty, aviation machinist's mate, third class, suffering from severe shock and multiple lacerations, and J. W. Blackman, aviation ordnance man, second class, slightly injured.

The crash was the first major accident to any of the Navy's new $150,000 flying boats.

Pan-American Plane Crashes, Crew of 3 Dead

Buenos Aires, Aug. 23 (AP)—The Pan American-Grace airplane Santa Elena crashed against the hills in Nogoli District, San Luis Province, today, killing the crew of three.

Austrian Fish Caught By President's Mother

Chinese Set Shanghai Afire; Hull Again Pleads for Peace

Asks Use of Diplomatic Principles to Settle Differences.

Assures U. S. Help To Stop Conflict

Wang Charges Duplicity, Greed, Cruelty Attend Japan's Invasion.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull in a formal statement last night again called on Japan and China "to refrain from resort to war" and to settle their difference within the framework of the 14 principles of international policy which he enunciated on July 16.

Apparently replying to a recent note of the Japanese government commenting on his July 16 declaration, Hull asserted that "we consider applicable throughout the world, in the Pacific area as elsewhere," the principles he set forth on that occasion. The Japanese had endorsed those principles, but indicated they did not regard them as applicable in the Far East because of "the actual particular circumstances of that region."

Asserting that while this government does not believe in political alliances or entanglements, it does not believe in extreme isolation, Hull intimated the United States would continue to do whatever it could to bring the Sino-Japanese conflict to an end and restore peace to the world.

"Ruthless Ambition."

The Secretary of State issued his formal statement to the press shortly after the Chinese Embassy here made public a message to the American people from Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the Chinese generalissimo and a graduate of Wellesley College for Women, declaring that the developments in Shanghai are a result of "Japan's ruthless ambition" to become a continental power and dominate the world.

She declared that the present carnage in Shanghai could have been prevented if foreign powers had prevented Japan from using the International Settlement there as a military base for an "undeclared war." The message added that China was fighting for her existence, her rights under the Nine-Power Pact and the right of small and weak nations to exist.

Dr. Chengting T. Wang, Chinese Ambassador to the United States, in a radio address, declared that "the military oligarchy of Japan is ravaging China with all its deadly weapons of war," adding that Japanese actions in China were not only "illegal" but were attended "with duplicity, greed, cruelty and vandalism."

He maintained that in carrying out a desire to dominate North China, "the Japanese militarists purposely created on July 7 'the incident' at Lukouchiao or Marco Polo Bridge, where Japan has no right to station troops and hold maneuvers." What followed was "an undeclared war for national aggrandisement and territorial expansion" on the part of Japan, he said. For China, he added, "it is armed resistance for the preservation of her national existence and independence."

Expresses Appreciation to U. S. He concluded by expressing appreciation "of the moral support and the keen sense of justice, so well expressed in the public opinion of this country," asserting that "it seems concrete actions are necessary to crystallize this moral force in the cause of world peace, which is inseparable from the prospect of peace in the Far East."

Later in the evening Chairman Key Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in a nationwide broadcast, defended the failure of the Roosevelt Administration to invoke the American neutrality act in the Sino-Japanese conflict. Pittman's contention was that the Sino-Japanese conflict did not

American's Story of Carnage As Shell Kills 400 in Shanghai

Janitor Claims He Slew Widow From Jealousy

Prosecutor Brands McAfee Story of Motive as a Lie or Ravings.

United States District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett is not satisfied of the truth of all of a confession obtained from William (alias Major) McAfee, colored janitor, yesterday charged with the murder of Mrs. Henrietta Anderson.

"The man has obviously told many lies in his confession," Garnett said. "I cannot believe what he says. I conferred with Allen Baker, who sat in on much of the questioning, and Baker is convinced that the man is either 'nutty' or a clever liar. I am inclined to believe he is nutty." Baker is a detective assigned to grand jury duties.

The district attorney indicated that he doubted McAfee's tale of a long series of sordid events leading up to the crime. He said he could not believe McAfee's explanation of the background of the case, or McAfee's explanation that jealousy was his motive. Garnett apparently believed McAfee's admission that he committed the murder, though he made no comment regarding this.

McAfee's confession obtained in the dawn hours of yesterday morning, described the brutal killing of the 36-year-old Veterans' Administration worker. She was found slain in her tiny apartment at 1633 L street northwest, beaten to death with a heavy weapon.

Capt. Ira Keck, of the Metropolitan Police, said the confession was wrung from McAfee by tripping him up on discrepancies in his story. The colored janitor claimed he had ushered two men into Mrs. Anderson's room.

Correspondent Escapes When Blast Smashes Two Stores, Injures 1,000; Watches Survivors Fight to Flee Ruins.

By Morris J. Harris.

Copyright, 1937, by the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Aug. 23.—I saw the busiest corner in China turned into a scene of carnage today when a heavy artillery shell plunged into the heart of Shanghai's Nanking road shopping district.

At least 400 persons were killed and probably 1,000 wounded. The toll easily may go higher than that. The projectile wrecked the city's two largest department stores, the Wing On Co. and the Sincere Co., teeming with the luncheon hour throngs. There were large areas of devastation that the searchers may not be able to dig into for days, and there was no chance that any survived in those tons of blasted steel and concrete.

The police admitted they could not tell how many—all innocent noncombatants—had perished in this latest chapter of slaughter. The two densely crowded stores immediately after the blast presented a ghastly picture. Hundreds of bodies lay heaped as if the fearful blast had neatly swept them into rows. I counted 200 bodies. I saw Europeans injured but none who was killed. Accurate counts were impossible. In desperate efforts to save the living, many dead were left in the ruins.

Tonight there was no way to determine whether the fatal projectile came from a Japanese or a Chinese gun. It might have been either, with the war raging on almost all sides of the city.

Among the wounded were three Americans. They were Anthony Billingham and Hallett Abend, both of the New York Times Staff in China, and Miss Blanche Tenney. I saw Abend, himself wounded in the foot, carrying Billingham through a crowd suddenly gone crazy with panic.

Billingham collapsed in the street and was carried to a nearby hospital. He was the only American killed. The thermometer recorded 65.

Pootung Burned to Aid Defense Against New Invaders.

Heavy Fire Rakes Landing Parties

Airplanes Sink Japanese Gunboat; Fight Covers Miles on River.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Aug. 24.—Raging, destructive fire became China's offensive weapon today against reinforced Japanese invaders.

Great, new fires, set by Shanghai's defenders, broke out in the darkness of early morning in Pootung, opposite the International Settlement on the Whangpoo River.

The Chinese, desperate in the face of powerful advancing units of the Japanese home army, were determined to burn Pootung to the very waterfront rather than permit millions of dollars in property and valuable stock of merchandise to fall into Japanese hands.

One of Shanghai's ancient pagodas was reduced to ashes by the fire. Vicious battle raged for miles along the Yangtze River's southern shore, north of this battle-scarred metropolis, as Chinese artillery, machine guns and war planes fought to keep the Japanese reinforcements from gaining a foothold on the flat, muddy banks of the river.

The fighting started yesterday when Japanese tried to put ashore enough men to give them victory in the devastating battle for Shanghai. Today the Japanese declared 30,000 officers and men landed from homeland troop transports, were advancing on Shanghai.

The Chinese disputed this. Only 15,000 Japanese had landed, they said, and that at heavy cost.

Planes Sink Gunboat.

An American eyewitness, Michael Hermann, Chicago oil chemist, reported seeing one Japanese destroyer badly crippled and a gunboat sunk by Chinese bombing planes as the warships sought to cover the landing near Woosung, 12 miles north of Shanghai, at the confluence of the Whangpoo and Yangtze Rivers.

The damaged destroyer was towed out of the fighting zone by a sister ship, Hermann reported, while the gunboat went down.

Chinese machine gunners, who would not be driven from their riverfront nests by blasting fire from covering warships and Japanese air bombers, took heavy toll as troop-filled boats from the troopships came ashore.

Guns Wreck Woosung.

The newly arrived reinforcements, if all are landed, would bring the total of Japan's armies in China to more than 150,000, indicating her determination to smash Chinese resistance to her policies. Still more soldiers were said to be coming.

Japanese guns wrecked Woosung in their efforts to silence the Chinese machine guns. The new Whangpoo docks, costing several million dollars, were damaged heavily. Most dwellings within the town of Woosung were in flames. Japanese planes bombed Kiachow Beach, Shanghai's Coney Island, just across the river from Woosung, wrecking it. Twenty farm villages around Woosung were set afire.

Americans in the area gave first aid to hundreds of Chinese wounded, but they ran out of bandages and hundreds suffered agony from unattended wounds.

The United States destroyer Parrott was lying in the Whangpoo to give what protection it could to the big Texas Oil Co. storage plant near the scene of one of the shore battles. Its crew saw a Japanese

A. F. of L. Council Directs Green to Investigate Labor's Non-Partisan League

C.I.O. Influence Charge Brings Inquiry Move

West Virginians Refuse to Expel Lewis' Followers From Group.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 23.—The American Federation of Labor executive council directed President William Green today to investigate Labor's Non-Partisan League with a view to withdrawing A. F. of L. support.

"Some reports come to us that, instead of being what its name implies, it's a C. I. O. organization," Green told reporters in explaining the council's action.

"If we find out it is definitely a C. I. O. outfit, we will advise our local officers to withdraw."

Green's Orders Refused.

Meanwhile, the West Virginia Federation of Labor, meeting at Parkersburg, refused to obey orders of Green to expel all C. I. O. unions. No opposition was voiced to a resolution declaring expulsion of the John L. Lewis supporters would "divide" labor in West Virginia.

Green declined comment.

After the council meeting, Daniel J. Tobin, president of the Truck Drivers Union and chairman of the Democratic National Committee's labor division, issued a statement saying Lewis would "not make the mistake of starting a third party."

"He has too much sense not to know what has happened to all third parties in our country for the last 40 years," Tobin added.

Asked whether he thought the country would be ready for a labor party in 1940, Green said:

C. I. O. Party Foreseen.

"I'm inclined to believe the leaders of the C. I. O. intend to set up a labor party, and when they do we'll find out whether the country is ready for it."

"I said from the first that the C. I. O. was founded for political as well as economic domination of the country."

The council's action and Tobin's statement followed hints from the Lewis camp the C. I. O. leader, angry with the Democratic Administration, was seriously considering organization of a third party.

Lewis and Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and Lewis' first lieutenant in the C. I. O., organized the Nonpartisan League before the 1936 Presidential campaign "to put labor on the record for Roosevelt."

Automobile Unionists Dissent.

Milwaukee, Aug. 23 (AP).—Rival factions within the United Automobile Workers of America continued to marshal forces tonight for a fight on centralization of power—a struggle which reports said tonight may prompt C. I. O. chieftains' intervention.

Delegates cheered Homer Martin, national president of the union, tonight, but great was the acclaim with which the majority of the delegates hailed their chief in his first platform appearance, the refusal of many delegates to join in indicated the growth of dissension.

Teachers' Union Asked to Study Joining C. I. O.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 23.—The American Federation of Teachers, an A. F. of L. union, plunged directly into the question of C. I. O. affiliation at the start of its twenty-first annual convention today.

Dr. Jerome Davis, of Yale University, federation president, termed the affiliation question the principal issue.

Davis spoke after Henry Ohl, Jr., president of the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor, had urged rejection of resolutions for C. I. O. affiliation.

Ohl charged the Wisconsin C. I. O. with "treachery, disruption, perjury and treason" and declared that "under such conditions, obviously, unity is not possible."

Davis said the A. F. of L. was preparing to levy special dues on member unions to fight the C. I. O. and added:

"It seems to me that our organization can never acquiesce in paying money to fight the organization of labor. We must not, we cannot, betray the organized workers of America by fighting the C. I. O."

Davis' ouster from the Yale faculty attracted national attention.

"Thanks to this federation's efforts in behalf of academic freedom," he said, "Yale has partially rescinded its action and has granted me a full year of freedom without responsibilities and with full salary during the coming year," he said today.

North Carolina Crash Injures D. C. Motorist

R. H. Griffith, of Washington, and Bernard Parrish, of LaCrosse, Va., were injured yesterday in an auto accident near Roanoke Rapids, N. C., according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Parrish suffered several broken ribs and a hip injury. Griffith was reported as not injured seriously.

3-Ct. Constitution Stamps To Go on Sale Sept. 17

Collectors desiring first-day cancellations should send not more than ten self-addressed covers to the Philadelphia postmaster by September 14. Postmaster General Farley said.

Politics and People

No 1934 Senate Correspondent Predicted Hugo L. Black Would Reach Supreme Court.

By Franklyn Waltman

WHEN Congress adjourned in 1934 the newspapermen covering the Senate decided to go collegiate and take a poll among themselves on such profound questions as which Senator was the "ablest Democrat," the "Senator with the most sex appeal," the "best dresser" and a number of similar questions.

Questionnaires were returned by 82 correspondents, and the results, when published, caused such a furor—one Senator later attributed his defeat to this poll and another said it was helpful in re-electing him—that the Capitol Hill correspondents have ever since shunned such an undertaking.

Incidentally, 39 of those participating in the 1934 poll selected the late Joseph T. Robinson as the "Senator most likely to go higher and where." All 39 believed he would go to the Supreme Court, while 22 thought Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg would be President.

Senator Robert F. Wagner would go to the Supreme Court, 4 predicted Senator Gerald P. Nye would some day become Vice President and 4 more visualized Senator James F. Byrnes sitting in the Cabinet.

This aspect of the results is interesting in that three years before a vacancy on the Supreme Court existed there was a widespread belief in the press gallery that Senator Robinson would get the first appointment. It is also interesting because none of the men who daily covered the Senate in 1934 had gone to the Supreme Court.

In the absence at the end of the last session of Congress of a poll of the Capitol Hill correspondents, the conductor of this column decided to make up his own questionnaire. Herewith appear questions and answers—sometimes why.

Senator who contributed most to the gayety of the session—Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, whose sense of humor kept some days from becoming unbearable and who has made a virtue of inconsistency.

Most effective member of Senate—Vice President John N. Garner, who proved he is no Throtheadbottom and finally got the session adjourned before murder or mayhem was committed.

Most outstanding Senator of session—Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, whose opposition to the Supreme Court reorganization plan put the kiss of death on that proposal and ended the myth that to be a liberal it was necessary to be a rubber-stamp for the White House.

Most courageous Senators during term—Frederick Van Nuys, Bennett Clark, Patrick McCarran—all Democrats, up for re-election next year—must share the honor with Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska.

Best oration of session—Hutton Sumner's address to the House in opposition to the Supreme Court reorganization plan.

Biggest disappointment of session—Collapse of the Supreme Court fight before William E. Borah could make an oration on that subject.

Most surprising event of session—Bottling up of wages and hours bill in the House Rules Committee.

Biggest blunder of session—Senator Joseph P. Guffey's speech calling for defeat of Democratic Senators who opposed the court bill.

Smartest member of the Senate—Henry Cabot Lodge, who said not a word, kept his eyes open and made friends all around—at the age of 35, with a six-year term, he can afford to bide his time.

Most impressive of the baby Senators serving their first term—Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who showed he has the makings of an orator—and H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, who demonstrated a Republican can think.

Senator who showed most previously unrevealed ability—Senator Burke, who did a masterful job in directing the strategy of the fight against the Court plan, must share the honor with Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, who dug up a great volume of facts in the West-Southern organization, housing and budget.

Most effective Congressional investigation—Senator Robert M. La Follette's Civil Liberties Committee inquiry into the use of labor spies.

Most effective Republican—Arthur H. Vandenberg.

Foremost clown of the session—Maury Maverick, of Texas.

tee's grass roots study of the farm situation will open in the West at Spokane, Wash., on September 30, and in the South at Winston-Salem, N. C., on October 18. Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, will captain the Southern division study, and Senator George McGill, of Kansas, the Western.

This group also will return to Washington November 1, possibly hold additional public hearings, then draft the Senate version of the Administration's proposed crop control program. Both houses have voted the farm program right of way next session.

The Senate Agriculture Committee's itinerary in the West includes Spokane, September 30, October 1 and 2; Boise, Idaho, October 4, 5 and 6; Grand Forks, N. Dak., October 12 and 13; St. Paul, Minn., October 15 and 16; Sioux City, Iowa, October 18 and 19; Topeka, Kans., October 22 and 23; Oklahoma City, October 27; Memphis, October 28, and Springfield, Ill., October 29 and 30.

The Southern swing, led by Smith, includes Winston-Salem, N. C., October 18; Columbia, S. C., October 19; Atlanta, Ga., October 20; Montgomery, Ala., October 21; New Orleans, October 22; Houston, Tex., October 25; Dallas, October 26; Oklahoma City, October 27; Springfield, Ill., October 27, and Springfield, Ill., October 29 and 30.

Prior to his departure for Europe, Chairman Byrnes said he had determined to study the British relief system "because they have had longer experience with relief than we have."

Meanwhile, Samuel Wilder King, Hawaii's delegate in Congress, announced plans for the first Congressional committee study of Hawaii's bid for statehood. Two Senators appointed by Vice President Garner, and 12 House members named by Speaker Bankhead, will embark for Honolulu October 5, returning to San Francisco October 28.

Chairman Sumners expressed his willingness to co-operate with the Senate group, but is mapping plans for an independent study of the judicial system, with special subjects assigned different members of his 25-man committee.

Sumners has not yet named a sub-committee.

"I probably will use every member of my committee," the Texas Representative said.

The Senate group will return to Washington about November 1 to assimilate the data it has collected. It is charged with a study of all bills introduced affecting the courts, including proposed constitutional amendments to compel retirements from the Supreme Court at 75, and to place one justice on the bench from each judicial circuit.

Chairman Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, is also chairman of the special group, but has delegated Hatch to lay the groundwork. Ashurst is leaving at once for Arizona. Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, the seventh member, is ill.

"I probably will use every member of my committee," the Texas Representative said.

The Senate group will return to Washington about November 1 to assimilate the data it has collected. It is charged with a study of all bills introduced affecting the courts, including proposed constitutional amendments to compel retirements from the Supreme Court at 75, and to place one justice on the bench from each judicial circuit.

Chairman Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, is also chairman of the special group, but has delegated Hatch to lay the groundwork. Ashurst is leaving at once for Arizona. Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, the seventh member, is ill.

The Senate Agriculture Committee's grass roots study of the farm situation will open in the West at Spokane, Wash., on September 30, and in the South at Winston-Salem, N. C., on October 18. Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, will captain the Southern division study, and Senator George McGill, of Kansas, the Western.

This group also will return to Washington November 1, possibly hold additional public hearings, then draft the Senate version of the Administration's proposed crop control program. Both houses have voted the farm program right of way next session.

The Senate Agriculture Committee's itinerary in the West includes Spokane, September 30, October 1 and 2; Boise, Idaho, October 4, 5 and 6; Grand Forks, N. Wyoming's Worst Forest Fire Under Control With 14 Dead

Heart-Broken Men Conquer Four-Day Blaze

40 Injured as Flames Consume 2,000 Acres of Timberland.

Cody, Wyo., Aug. 23.—Weary, heartbroken men struggled mechanically tonight to mop up the Nation's most disastrous forest fire in many years, which burned to death 14 of their fellow firefighters and injured more than 40 others.

"Our battle is nearly over," said John Sicker, supervisor of the Shoshone National Forest. He was near exhaustion after four days directing the now slowly dying fire.

David Godwin, instructed by F. A. Silcox, chief of the United States Forest Service, to investigate the fire's origin, was en route by plane from California.

2,000 Acres Burned.

The fire burned over approximately 2,000 acres of heavy woodland in the Absaroka Mountains of northwest Wyoming.

In Cody, 35 miles southeast of the blaze, 23 men were in hospitals. Physicians said they had a good chance to recover.

"As a fire it was not as bad as some we have experienced," said Sicker, "but Saturday night's tragedy made it the most horrible in Wyoming's history."

"No one can be blamed for the 14 lives that were lost. The wind was wholly responsible."

Men who came out of the trap declared panic drove some of the victims to run into the fire to die.

Sam Van Arsdale, of Cody, Bureau of Public Roads employee, said he was impelled to run down into the approaching fire.

Saves Self by Turning.

But she said, while others ran straight into it trying to make their way through, the intense heat blast turned him around and sent him scurrying back toward the rim rock.

"All the time I was running, I was thinking of dying," he said.

"I remember there were other fellows running with me down the hill but they didn't turn around. I guess they tried to run through."

"But I saw some of them just lie down there and let the fire burn over them."

When I woke up many of the fellows around me were screaming. There was still a lot of smoke and it made me panicky. I tried not to scream.

"Somebody came in then and found us."

"It was the most terrible experience I ever went through."

Flier Swaps Plane For Train, Falls, Lands in Hospital

New York, Aug. 23 (U.P.)—Maj. Al Williams, well-known speed and test pilot, was in a hospital tonight with a cracked kneecap. The flier, who has had many narrow escapes from death, cracked up when he fell two feet from a Pullman berth last night while en route from Pittsburgh to New York. He had left his plane in Pittsburgh because the weather seemed too dangerous to fly home.

James R. Carmer, Rail Worker, Dies

James R. Carmer, 83, of 766 Newton place northwest, retired railroad employee, died yesterday at his home.

Born in New York State, Mr. Carmer had been an employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad for 30 years and came to Washington from Wilmington, Del., where he was a foreman on his retirement in 1922.

His wife, Mrs. Nannie M. Carmer; a niece, Mrs. Margaret Fullerton; and a nephew, Dr. W. D. Sporr, of New York, survive.

Funeral services will be tomorrow at 9 a. m. at the S. H. Hines funeral home. Burial will be in Wilmington.

Wallace Asks Roosevelt for 9c Cotton Loan

Secretary of Agriculture Favors Special Session for Farm Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace urged President Roosevelt yesterday to authorize a Federal loan of 9 cents a pound on cotton.

After a conference at the White House the Agriculture Secretary said he had discussed cotton loans and the sugar quota bill awaiting Presidential action.

Wallace said he had always advocated a special session of Congress to consider farm and other bills.

Without saying what action the Chief Executive expected to take on sugar, he added, in response to a question, that the quota measure in its present form was "somewhat less objectionable" than before it was revised in the closing days of Congress.

Some sources have indicated the bill would be vetoed because of its provision continuing restrictions on imports of refined sugar from island possessions.

A 10-cent loan was advocated by many cotton States' Senators and Congressmen.

As to machinery to handle the Federal subsidy equivalent to the difference between the amount of the loan and 12 cents, Wallace said producers would be asked to save their sales slips.

The subsidies would not be paid until after farmers actually complied with surplus control legislation for 1938, which Congress has put at the top of its calendar for next session.

Corn Crop Saved By Timely Shower

Hagerstown, Aug. 23.—Most of Washington County's large corn crop will be saved by heavy weekend showers, farmers reported today. Five weeks of drought during part of July and August damaged some of the early corn, but late corn has been saved by the heavy showers. The rains, however, were too late to save the cantaloupe crop, which will be only about 25 per cent of normal.

Syphilis Hospital on Wheels Visits Capital en Route South

Trailer Clinic to Combat Disease in Georgia Turpentine, Lumber Camps on 400-Mile Weekly Itinerary.

The latest fighting unit in the war on syphilis stopped here yesterday on the way to Georgia from its Detroit manufacturing base. A fully equipped, furnished trailer, the wheeled clinic was inspected by officials of the United States Public Health Service.

The project, which is financed jointly by the Health Service, the Georgia State Department of Public Health and the Brunswick District Health Unit, is an experiment in controlling venereal diseases in rural sections. The trailer will travel about 400 miles a week in McIntosh, Glynn and Camden Counties in Georgia.

Weekly clinics will be held, Dr. L. E. Burney said, in the trailer. Dr. Burney's salary will be paid by the Public Health Service. The Georgia Department of Public Health will finance a white nurse and a colored nurse who will accompany him, and three medical workers to do case work.

The two-wheeled trailer cost $3,750. Its roof is insulated against the Georgia sun and pierced with two skylights to provide illumination. The doors and windows are screened and equipped with Venetian blinds.

Comfortable benches upholstered in green leather line the rear of the trailer, which can be curtained off and used as an examination room. Injections will be administered in the front section on a table topped with green linoleum. Electric sterilizers for the injection needles give the interior a properly professional air.

The roving clinic will begin operations early in September. Public Health Service officials stress the experimental nature of the project but say that it will be recommended to other States if the Georgia venture proves successful.

Sen. Byrd Promises Aid To Blue Ridge Mission

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 23.—The interest of Senator Harry F. Byrd has been enlisted in the mission work being conducted by the Episcopal Church, Diocese of Virginia, among the poor people of the Blue Ridge Mountains, and he has promised to use his influence to have a suitable road constructed, leading from the Skyline drive to the mission at Tanners Ridge, in Page County.

This mission, located 16 miles from the top of the Blue Ridge, will soon have a new church, as well as a clothing bureau. The house of the worker in charge, Miss Janet Walton, also is being enlarged.

Tanners Ridge is one of four missions in Page County under the pastoral care of the Rev. Paul Shultz, of Luray. The other missions are at Pine Grove Hollow, Ingham and Cabbage Hollow.

Health Head Explains 'Haunted' House Noises

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 23 (P).—The State health department put at rest today fears of children in the Statehouse neighborhood who complained to parents of a mysterious haunted house.

The youngsters told of eerie squeals, vague thumpings and a blue light which emanated from a house.

Mrs. Katherine Cox, of the health department, said the children heard the squeals of guinea pigs, the thumping of hopping rabbits and saw a light which flashed on and off at regular intervals on an incubator.

Reserve Bank Never Married In Minneapolis Slain Butcher 'Widow' Admits

Reduction to 1½ Per Cent Made to Aid Crops' Movement.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board approved last night a reduction from 2 to 1½ per cent in the discount rate of the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank, effective today.

The reduction, which will tend to ease money conditions in the Minneapolis area, followed similar reductions last week by the Atlanta and Chicago reserve institutions.

Officials said it is designed to make money available at a lower rate, permitting the banks to meet borrowers' needs without liquidating security holdings or borrowing outside the area, which includes North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Minnesota and Northwestern Wisconsin.

Free Flow of Credit.

Board officials said the reduction should permit a free flow of credit for the movement of crops.

Meanwhile, it was reported, member banks of the reserve system have continued to lighten their holdings of Government securities during the week ended August 18.

A report covering 191 cities showed these holdings declined by the net sum of $15,000,000, bringing total holdings to $9,370,000,000. This was $1,194,000,000 under holdings for the corresponding week a year ago.

Increase Offset.

During the week ended August 18, holdings of direct Government securities increased $22,000,000, presumably due to bank purchases in a $50,000,000 offering of discount bills by the Treasury. This increase, however, was more than offset by a $37,000,000 decline in holdings of fully-guaranteed Federal obligations.

For the week the banks' loans to commerce, industry and agriculture advanced on securities as collateral, recorded a $1,000,000 upturn to $387,000,000.

Similar loans otherwise secured and unsecured climbed $31,000,000 to $3,993,000,000.

These loans, which measure the extent of private credit demands, have been increasing all year.

Unionist Muzzled Assailing Roper

By the Associated Press.

The Maritime Commission yesterday cut off as "irrelevant" testimony that the Marine Inspection and Navigation Bureau was inefficient, which was offered by Ralph Emerson, legislative spokesman of the National Maritime Union, at a hearing into wage and working conditions.

The commission soon will fix wage and hour scales and working conditions on American vessels.

"We lay the blame directly at the feet of Daniel Roper, the Secretary of Commerce," Emerson said before Commissioner Thomas M. Woodward stopped him.

11 Injured in Riot At Pa. Steel Plant

Pittsburgh, Aug. 23 (P).—Rioting at the strike-blasted Heppensall Steel Co., where a barrage of flying bricks, cobbles and tools injured 11 men, none seriously, was brought under control by police reserves tonight.

Police officers asserted the disorder followed an attempt by company officials to rush two automobile loads of nonstrikers into the plant at nearby Lawrenceville.

Navy Hospital Site Selection Deferred

Naval officials yesterday said no further effort to select a site for a new naval hospital and medical center would be made until the next Congress. They pointed out that even if a site were selected no money would be available to purchase the land.

"It's just one of those things that happen," Rear Admiral Percival S. Rossiter, surgeon general of the Navy, said.

Japanese Will 'Readjust' Private Holdings to Expand Their War Industries

Arms Makers Will Benefit By Restrictions

Finance Minister Denies Control Measures Are Compulsory.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Aug. 23.—The Japanese government today made public plans to tighten its control over the private wealth of the empire to further its program for placing Japan under a wartime economic regime.

Okinobu Kaya, finance minister, said the government "finds it necessary to readjust investment capital" in order to increase funds available for expansion of munitions industries and foreign trade.

To meet immediate needs of army and navy operations in China, the government decided to issue shortly 200,000,000 yen (about $58,000,000) in deficit bonds.

The finance minister took occasion to assure financiers the government has no intention of compelling business to underwrite its national defense bonds with its fixed reserves or of establishing "unreasonable capital control."

But Kaya added that a banking syndicate, with the official Bank of Japan as the leading member, was considering voluntary measures for the readjustment of capital.

A high official of the Tokyo Stock Exchange said: "Control of industrial funds naturally will result in ample supplies of funds for industries connected with the present situation, such as the munitions and export industries. These will benefit from restrictions on the expansion of non-urgent industries."

Windsors Hosts To 1,600 Austrians At Beer Festival

Noetsch, Austria, Aug. 23 (AP).—Chorusing the ancient drinking song, "Steck den Leber," the peasants of Gail Valley bade hail and farewell tonight to the Windsors, who found this quiet retreat the ideal setting for their honeymoon.

The occasion was the Duke of Windsor's garden party at Wasserleoburg Castle, and he was host to 1,600 residents of the community and countryside—with band, beer, contests and heart-shaped cake.

Many guests didn't realize that the duke and duchess tentatively planned to leave here September 15, perhaps on a hunting trip to Hungary.

Chicago to War On Degeneracy

Chicago, Aug. 23 (AP).—A four-point program for war on degeneracy was evolved by city and county law enforcement officials today in an emergency session in the wake of three sex crimes, one a homicide, within 48 hours.

Major points of the war included: 1. An immediate drive against the degeneracy menace with a centralization of police activities.

2. A meeting of Chicago and State psychiatrists next Friday at which State legislation for removing sex degenerates from society will be discussed.

3. Placement of guards around hospitals, nurses' homes and hotels where sex degenerates and other structures provide access to sleeping quarters.

4. Conferences for arrangements to prevent women from renting hotel rooms within reach of outside structures.

Americans Leave Hankow by Train

The American Consulate General at Hankow, China, reported to the State Department yesterday that the following Americans left Hankow by train for Canton, en route to Hongkong:

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard J. Christie, Albany N. Y.; Mrs. Alma Mead and three children, Santa Ana, Calif.; Arthur Rugh, New York City; George Seybold, Elkridge, Md.; Miss Margaret Higgins, Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. E. W. Galt, Miss Faith Galt.

Russia Jails Ex-Prince For Auto Parts Theft

Moscow, Aug. 23 (AP).—Former Prince Boris Golitsine, member of one of the proudest families of Czarist Russia, today was sentenced to five years' imprisonment for stealing state property.

Under the Soviet regime the former prince had been since 1932 the manager of a garage belonging to the Moscow Street Construction Trust. The court found he had bought old automobiles for small amounts, used spare parts in his garage to repair and overhaul them, then sold them and pocketed the profits.

2d Death on Same Spot Laid to N.Y. Motorman

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—Streetcar Motorman James Minnaugh, 36, was cleared of running down and killing Dr. Frederick Porter Hammond, 70, at the intersection of Broadway and Ninety-first street June 3 because evidence against him was insufficient.

Today he was released in bail on a charge of technical homicide. Prosecutors said he car struck and killed Ennie Kleberg, 70, at the same crossing.

Convicts Are Suspected Of Killing Patrolman

Ashville, N. C., Aug. 23 (AP).—Officers tonight suspected that escaped convicts killed George C. Brown, 25, State highway patrolman last night after he chased a speeding automobile into a 3-d-end road near here. Officers said the killers then hid and drove their machine over the body.

Hull Again Asks China, Japan To Stop War

Urges Use of 14 Principles of International Policy to Halt Conflict.

constitute a state of war within the meaning of the neutrality act.

Recalling the Japanese assault on Shanghai in 1932, with its sudden end, Pittman contended the President should be cautious in invoking the neutrality act lest the fighting around Shanghai now should similarly come to an abrupt end.

He pointed out differences between the Sino-Japanese conflict and the Italo-Ethiopian war in 1935.

"Until there is a declaration of war," he said, "or until facts develop that make it obvious that such conflict is going to be carried to a point where one side conquers, or the free commerce of neutral nations is interfered with, then it would be unnecessary and unwise for the President, in whom is vested the authority and responsibility, to declare that a state of war exists."

Meanwhile, the Government took no official notice of the Americans reported wounded in Shanghai when a huge shell crashed into the International Settlement early yesterday. Secretary Hull said he deplored the incident but that it constituted one of the unfortunate events in that kind of situation about which nothing could be done.

Responsibility Undetermined

Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander of the United States Asiatic fleet, reported to the Navy Department that a board of inquiry had been unable to determine whether the shell which hit his flagship, the cruiser Augusta, last week had been fired by a Japanese or Chinese gun. Explosion of the shell killed one American sailor and wounded 18. Yarnell said he had warned both the Japanese and Chinese commanders to be more cautious in the future.

Secretary Hull began his formal statement by pointing out that last week he had announced that legislative action had been sought to make available $500,000 for emergency relief necessitated by the Far Eastern situation and that this Government had ordered a regiment of 1,200 Marines to leave San Diego for Shanghai to re-enforce the American Marines now there.

He pointed out that this Government is engaged in facilitating an orderly and safe removal of Americans from the disturbed zones and in seeking to protect them from mobs or other uncontrolled elements. The American armed forces in China and en route there, he added, "have no mission of aggression."

World Peace Threatened

But the issues involved in the Far Eastern situation, he explained, "go far beyond merely the immediate question of protection of the nationals and interests of the United States. The outbreak of hostilities there, he said, threaten world peace and consequently have a relationship to his July 16 declaration of fundamental principles for governing international relationships.

"Without attempting to pass judgment regarding the merits of the controversy," he asserted, "we appeal to the parties to refrain from resort to war. We urge that they settle their differences in accordance with principles which in the opinion not alone of our people but of most peoples of the world should govern in international relationships."

He pointed out that the principles embodied in the Washington conference (which included the nine-power pact) and the Kellogg-Briand pact of Paris.

In July 16 declaration to which more than 50 nations favorably responded, Hull condemned "the use of force in pursuit of policy" and "interference in the internal affairs of other nations."

He pointed out this Government advocated "adjustment of problems in international relations by processes of peaceful negotiation and agreement" and laid emphasis on the necessity for observance of the sanctity of treaties.

Text of Hull Statement

Text of the statement issued last night by Secretary of State Cordell Hull on the Sino-Japanese conflict was as follows:

At his press conference on August 17, the Secretary of State announced that (1) legislative action to make available funds for purposes of emergency relief necessitated by the situation in the Far East had been asked and that (2) this Government had given orders for a regiment of Marines to prepare to proceed to Shanghai. The Secretary then discussed at some length the principles of policy on which this Government was proceeding.

The situation at Shanghai is in many respects unique. Shanghai is a great cosmopolitan center, with a population of over three million, a port which has been developed by the nationals of many countries, at which there have prevailed mutually advantageous contacts of all types and varieties between and among the Chinese and people of almost all other countries of the world. At Shanghai, there exists a multiplicity of rights and interests which are of inevitable concern to many countries, including the United States.

In the present situation, the American Government is engaged in facilitating in every way possible an orderly and safe removal of American citizens from the area where there is special danger. Further, it is the policy of the American Government to afford its nationals appropriate protection, primarily against mobs or other uncontrolled elements. For that purpose it has for many years maintained small detachments of American troops at Shanghai and for that purpose it is sending the present small re-enforcement. These armed forces there have no mission of aggression. It is their function to be of assistance toward maintenance of order and security. It has been the desire and the intention of the American Government to remove these forces when performance of their function of protection is no longer called for, and such remains its desire and intention.

The issues and problems which are of concern to this Government in the present situation in the Pacific area go far beyond merely the immediate question of protection of the nationals and interests of the United States. The conditions which prevail in that area are intimately connected with the fundamental principles of the world, these fundamental principles.

From the beginning of the present controversy in the Far East, we have been urging upon both the Chinese and the Japanese governments the importance of refraining from hostilities and of maintaining peace. We have been participating constantly in consultation with interested governments directed toward peaceful adjustment. This Government does not believe in political alliances or entanglements, nor does it believe in extreme isolation. It does believe in international cooperation for the purpose of seeking through pacific methods the achievement of those objectives set forth in the statement of July 16. In the light of our well-defined attitude and policies, and within the range thereof, this Government believes and to which it is committed.

This Government is endeavoring to see kept alive, strengthened and revitalized, in reference to the Pacific area and to all the world, these fundamental principles.

Quake Aid Needed By 2,000 Filipinos

Manila, Aug. 23 (AP).—Driven to the verge of madness by terrific, devastating earthquakes that convulsed their island three days, the 2,000 residents of Alabat, 75 miles from here, awaited response to their plea they be evacuated by the Philippine government.

All shelters were ripped apart and flattened. Army officers reported. A corps of government seismologists left Manila to investigate.

Spanish War Veterans Criticize Miss Perkins

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 23 (AP).—Delegates attending the thirty-ninth annual encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans criticized Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins today in proposed resolutions attacking communism and aliens.

William L. Grayson, of Savannah, Ga., chairman of the resolutions committee, said a resolution submitted to him protested against what it termed a "sympathetic attitude of Miss Perkins toward aliens."

American Sees Shell Kill 400 In Shanghai

Eyewitness Story of Blast in 2 Stores; 1,000 Hurt, 3 From U. S.

the shell could have done more havoc.

The Sincere Co.'s big seven-story building faces Wing On's new 16-story skyscraper across narrow Nanking road which is teeming, day and night.

Store Fronts Blown Out

The entire facade and one whole corner of the Sincere Co.'s store was blown out. Behind me, the fronts of the Wing On store's two buildings seemed to fly out from their foundations, then crumble in a rain of litter.

I was surrounded suddenly by death.

Most of the bodies were horribly twisted and burned black. Rivulets of blood ran in the trolley tracks and pools glistened in the street. Bodies were torn to fragments. Some arms and legs were flattened against building fronts by the terrific force. Some were blasted as far as two blocks.

I turned back into Wing On's to find it a shambles. The explosion had ripped through walls as if they had been tissue paper. Hundreds lay about, either dead, wounded or so dazed and white with shock that they appeared dead.

Hundreds Fight to Escape

Hundreds, crazed by fear, sought to escape from the wrecked building. Stairways and exits were choked. Scores must have perished in the crush to escape.

Elevators were jammed wherever the blast caught them. In them I saw scores of dead and many grievously wounded, the latter fighting to escape. The elevators had become cages filled with animals in human form. In many the lifts boys lay, apparently killed by the blast.

Most of the store's staff were lying about, dead, hurt or shell-shocked. A few managers who had survived the blast tried to control the crowds, but none heard them. It was a tide of humanity fighting in panic for life and learning through any open space.

Outside I found sections of the two towering stores hanging dizzily over the street. Balconies and railings sagged. Here and there bodies were draped on balustrades.

Another Falls to Explode

The charred bodies of a Sikh and two Chinese policemen hung grotesquely from a twisted, swaying traffic light pole.

Scores of mortally wounded staggered blindly, insanely away from the ruins to collapse and die. They lay there until police had gathered up those whose lives might be saved.

How the victims staggered off I do not know. They must have waded through inches of water. They were not pushed and tumbled by thousands of frenzied relatives who stampeded into the street to claim their dead and dying.

Two other shells fell. One crashed through six stories of a warehouse used by the United States Navy, but its impact was broken by a soft bed of rice and it did not explode. Scores of Americans almost certainly would have been killed or maimed.

The other terrified 6,500 inmates of the Ward Road Prison, the latest in the world, when it struck the fortress-like building in the northern sector of the International Settlement.

When the Nanking road shell originated was not known. Military experts said it might have been a 120-pound 8-inch explosive which Japanese warships off Woosung were known to be firing.

Americans Aid Wounded

The slightest variation in range of trench mortars which both the Chinese and Japanese are using also might have sent a stray shell whistling into the neutral area.

American members of the Shanghai volunteer corps were among the first on the scene, ahead of the police and Red Cross. They had to battle their way through crowds and a mass of twisted wires and wreckage to reach the dead and injured.

Rescuers commandeered ambulances and other automobiles to race the victims to first-aid. The injured were carried away on anything that could be found—stretchers, torn-down screens and boards.

Trucks came and went behind the workers, disappearing with loads of bodies and swiftly returning.

Police Shovel Bodies

When police reinforcements arrived they went to work with shovels and hose, gathering up fragments of humans and carting them off in huge baskets.

While this work went on at least 10,000 terrorized natives jammed the nearby streets, clamoring to be allowed to search for friends and relatives. Police were forced to strong measures to restrain them.

Every pane of glass was shattered in buildings for blocks. Even the nineteenth floor tower of the Wing On building—a skyline landmark—was pitted with shell fragments. So terrific was the force that even those skyscraper windows were blown out.

Dead Uncounted

It will take days even to get an approximation of the loss of life. One huge section of the Wing On store's fallen ceiling, fully 100 dead shoppers still must be lying.

I had gone to Wing On's to replenish the Associated Press bureau's stationery supplies, depleted by the task of covering the war. There shortly before the blast I had met Abend and Billingham, who were buying binoculars to help their observation of the war in the air. I saw many other foreigners in or near the two stores just before the holocaust.

I also laid in a small stock of groceries, for food is running short here. When the shell fell I dropped my armful of paper, pencils and canned tomatoes. When I returned after a survey of the scene of disaster they were still there on the sidewalk. In that time of horror no one paid any attention to such trifles.

Plane Shot Down by Chinese Air Force

Meanwhile, as the battle raged on its outskirts Shanghai itself did not escape.

Some 400 noncombatants, nearly 1,000 wounded when a heavy artillery shell plunged into lunch hour crowds yesterday between the two largest department stores of the city.

Three Americans were among the wounded.

The civilian death toll in the International Settlement and the French concession rose to more than 3,500.

Military casualties had risen into the tens of thousands.

On the twelfth day of fighting between the great Chinese and Japanese forces battling for control of this metropolis much of Shanghai was a shambles.

There was heavy fighting early today along Shanghai's waterfront. The Japanese claimed they had eliminated the two salients which the Chinese drove into their lines in the Yangtseepoo and Hongkew areas of the International Settlement. The Bund was rocked by heavy fire from Japanese warships, directed against Pootung.

The terrific bombardment started several new fires in the already flame-blackened section.

Japanese Government spokesmen said it was believed that the new Japanese offensive would drive swiftly into Shanghai once the reinforcements are landed on the Yangtze.

Foreign military experts expressed belief the Japanese objective would be to drive all Chinese forces from Shanghai and the whole area between here and the Yangtze.

It was believed this drive would result in heavy fighting in Chapei. Shanghai's native quarter adjacent to the International Settlement.

The Fourth Regiment of United States, on guard along Soochow Creek, overlooking Chapei, prepared for action. Their duty is to prevent belligerents, Chinese or Japanese, from entering that part of the settlement in which American and other foreign interests are centered.

U. S. Marines Dig In.

The Marines withdrew all passes for civilians to pass their lines, strengthened their sandbagged, barbed-wire barricades and posted watches in sandbagged positions atop high buildings overlooking the Chapei battle front.

Maj. Naokata Utsunomiya, spokesman for the Japanese army, declared that the new forces would deal a death blow to the Chinese forces around Shanghai before the Chinese could retreat.

"Thus far we have been on the defensive," he said. "Now we are ready to launch an offensive."

Chinese officers said they had moved their first and second divisions, flower of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's modernized, German-trained army, into the Shanghai front line and were ready for whatever the Japanese had to offer.

Evacuation Speeded.

With the belligerents apparently preparing for still greater battles, Americans and other foreign residents speeded evacuation of the war-torn city. An hundred and sixty Americans were booked to sail Tuesday aboard the liner President Pierce, bringing the total of Americans who have fled from Shanghai's war to 1,500. Two hundred fifty more have booked for the American liner, sailing August 28. The Empress of Canada, sailing Wednesday, will carry 1,000 British and other foreigners.

Three other American liners are to carry refugee contingents from Shanghai between now and August 31.

Meager dispatches from the North China war zone told of fighting increasing in scope and intensity. Japanese airplanes were reported flying over Peiping to bomb Chinese concentrations to the south. Tient-sin reported clashes of considerable Chinese and Japanese forces south of that city.

Fear of Airport Safety Bill Veto Increased by Agriculture Aides' Fight on Lease

Industry Chief Claims Special Value for Land

Act Before Roosevelt Directs That Field Go to Port.

Fears that President Roosevelt would veto the bill for improvement of Washington Airport passed by Congress last Friday, were increased by opposition to the measure expressed yesterday by Department of Agriculture officials.

Frederick D. Richey, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, said that the 53 acres which would be leased to the airport under the terms of the bill awaiting the President's signature were "worth a great deal" for certain types of experimentation.

The measure for improvement of Washington Airport directs the Secretary of Agriculture to lease 53 acres of the experimental farm to the terminal for $1 a year within six months after the date on which the President signs the bill. It also authorizes the filling of Boundary Channel, lagoon, and the terms of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission is obtained.

Provides for Lease.

The bill provides that Military road, which crosses the landing field, shall be leased to the terminal for 25 years, and that the airport shall pay $25,000 to Arlington County for construction of a substitute highway.

Asked if the bureau would oppose the measure because of the provision for leasing the land to the airport, Richey replied: "Well, how would you like to lose your right hand? The land in question has been drained, provided with overhead irrigation, and brought to a high state of fertility. It is the only land on the farm suitable for certain types of experiments, and it is near our greenhouses and other buildings where tests are made."

He also pointed out that no other suitable land near Washington is in the possession of the Agriculture Department. "The facilities we have over there," he said, "could be duplicated if we were given the money and a little time, but no provision has been made by Congress to replace the land which may be taken away from us."

Officials of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission last night declared that the measure has not yet been considered by the commission.

Samuel J. Solomon, manager of Washington Airport, indicated yesterday that he was well pleased with the provisions of the bill. "It is a decided step forward," he said. "Our board hasn't yet taken any action on a program for development of the airport."

"If the measure becomes law, we will undertake an extensive series of improvements. There is still a chance that we may be able to fill the lagoon and provide the cross-runways which the pilots have demanded."

19 Reported Slain, 25 Hurt in Labor Riots in Bahamas

Miami, Fla., Aug. 23 (AP).—Vessels docking tonight from Nassau brought reports that fatal rioting had occurred on Great Inagua Island of the Bahamas group. The rioting was attributed to labor trouble.

One report said 19 were killed and 25 hurt. The last message from the Great Inagua radio station was said to have been an S O S call. The station is now out of commission. British officials were reported speeding from Nassau and Jamaica for Great Inagua.

Flier Crosses Pole Seeking Russians

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 23 (AP).—A message intercepted by the Pacific Alaska Airways radio station here today reported Sir George Hubert Wilkins, explorer, had flown over the North Pole in his search for six missing Russian transpolar fliers.

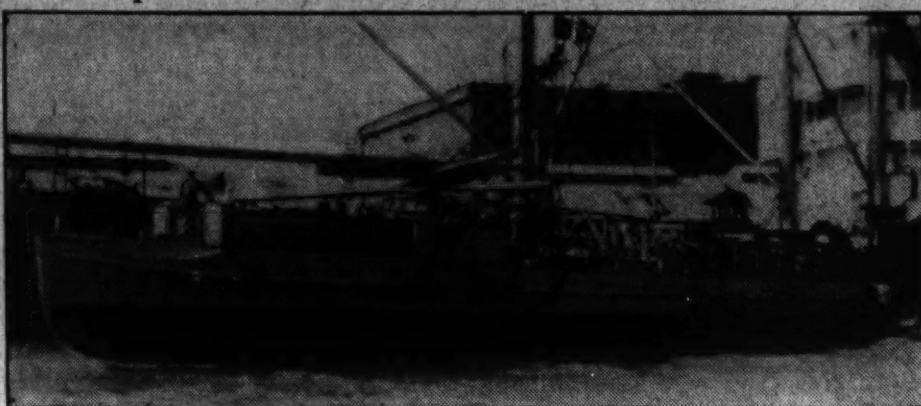

Moscow, Aug. 23 (AP).—Three transpolar air heroes of Soviet Russia came home today to find their fellow fliers bent on rescue of Sigismund Levanevsky and five companions, missing on an over-the-pole flight from Moscow to New York. The returning aviators were Mikhail Gromov, Andrei Yumoshin and Sergei Danilin, who made a record-breaking flight from Moscow to California last month. Their wives and government officials headed a wildly cheering crowd of welcome.

Soviet Finds Fault With Film Makers

Moscow, Aug. 23 (AP).—Russia's movie makers were attacked today in Izvestia, official government newspaper, both for the quality and quantity of their work.

As it did earlier this month, most of Izvestia's anger fell on Boris Shumitsky, head of the industry, who has been blamed for extravagance, misleading reports on production and mediocre films. "An obviously counter-revolutionary film, 'Father and Son,'" said an Izvestia article signed "Cinema Worker," "was approved for production by Shumitsky, who even ranked the film as one of the 15 best pictures of 1936."

League Favors Jewish, Arabic Palestine States

Mandates Body Approves British Partition Plan as 'Test' Policy.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Aug. 23.—Great Britain's proposal to create sovereign homelands for Jews and Arabs in Palestine was approved as a "test" policy today by the League of Nations mandates commission.

A political apprenticeship with the two states, either united under a single mandate (Britain) or under separate mandates, was suggested.

"Cantonization" of the Holy Land, center of three great religions and cauldron of age-old racial hatreds, would give the two states "a wide measure of internal autonomy and full power to regulate immigration," at the same time uniting them under the mandatory power (Britain) in matters of defense and foreign affairs, the official communiqué said.

Otherwise, the states might function under separate mandates which would continue "until such time as each had given proof of its ability to govern itself."

After declaring itself favorable to the solution offered by Britain, the mandates commission both praised and criticized the British policy in Palestine.

It stated that Britain had tried for 20 years to appease antagonistic feelings in Palestine. The commission asked the Jews, who "all too often and without justification show impatience at delay at the hesitation of the mandatory power to ask themselves whether there is any other nation by which they had been so little persecuted."

The commission blamed the British lack of firmness and a "certain fluctuation in policy," which tended to encourage belief on the part of Arabs that violence could stop Jewish immigration.

These States probably will not become eligible before 1939 unless they call special sessions of their Legislatures to pass essential laws. The law-making bodies of most of them do not meet again in regular sessions until 1939.

The director explained that the new program, which the Interior Department will supervise through a National Housing Authority, is a decentralized one. Housing authorities—legal entities separate from the States, counties and municipalities—will do the building with a 90 per cent Federal loan and a 10 per cent local contribution.

The principal function of the Federal agency, Gray said, is to approve applications for loans and see that the projects are developed according to plans.

Train Wreck Kills 10 Italian Sailors; Sabotage Hinted

Genoa, Italy, Aug. 23 (AP).—Italian civil and military authorities carried out a carefully guarded investigation tonight of a strange head-on collision that killed ten sailors of the second naval squadron.

A trainman also was killed and numerous sailors were hurt. Newspapers up to early tonight had been forbidden to publish news of the disaster. Railroad men hinted at sabotage.

Farouk to Marry Boyhood Friend—When She Is 17

Cairo, Aug. 23 (AP).—Young King Farouk of Egypt checked a bride today—but they will not be married until next year, after his fiancée's seventeenth birthday.

The bride-to-be of the 18-year-old monarch is Mile. Sadi Naaz, pretty, vivacious daughter of Youssef Bey Zulfikar, counselor of the Alexandria mixed court of appeals, and grand-daughter of former Premier Fasha Said. Sadi and Farouk have been friends since their early childhood.

Jo V. Morgan Named Counsel In Charge of Taxation Here

Seal's New Aide Has Practiced 25 Years at District Bar.

Jo V. Morgan, member of one of the leading law firms here, yesterday was appointed assistant corporation counsel in special charge of legal matters under the 1937 tax law. He will assume his new duties tomorrow.

The appointment to the newly created post was made on the recommendation of Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, who informed the Commissioners the recent tax law added additional burdens to his "already overburdened office."

The post carries a yearly salary of $4,600.

Profound Lawyer Needed.

In making his recommendation, Seal said: "The enforcement of the act will require preparation of rules and regulations as well as many opinions and actions at law in the courts under the supervision of the corporation counsel. This is a new field and requires the services of a profound lawyer."

"Mr. Morgan has had wide and varied practice at the local bar, including trial practice, corporate financing, taxation, international and maritime law. He is an outstanding lawyer fitted in every way to undertake the position of special counsel in charge of taxation."

Twenty-five Yes. Practice.

The new appointee is a member of the law firm of Douglas, Obar, Morgan & Campbell, and received a leave of absence in order to serve the District government. He has practiced for 25 years in Washington before the District courts and the United States Supreme Court. He is 49 years old and received his legal education at the Georgetown University School of Law, graduating with a LL.B. degree in 1909, and receiving a LL.M. degree a year later. He lectures at National University Law School on conflicts of law, bailments and legal ethics. Several years ago he was decorated by the Cuban Government in recognition of legal services performed by him here.

During the World War, Morgan served in the United States Marine Corps. He is an active member of the Knights of Columbus and of the Sigma Nu Phi Fraternity. He lives at Edgemoor, Md.

Money Thrown Away.

Every dollar spent in taking the voluntary census of employment approved by Congress at the end of the session will be a dollar thrown away. It is to be hoped, therefore, that a simple and relatively inexpensive method of enumeration will be devised, putting a minimum amount of strain upon responsible agencies such as the Bureau of the Census and the United States Employment Service.

The census officials are engrossed in preparations for the next regular census. The United States Employment Service is engaged in expanding its facilities for scientific registration of the unemployed, and placement of the employed in better jobs. It would be most unfortunate to burden these important organizations with a task of enumeration that has no practical value whatever.

Mr. Hopkins admits that an unemployed census is not needed by the WPA. It is of no use to placement agencies, public or private. Finally, the results will be too unreliable to satisfy even the most idle curiosity as to the extent of unemployment.

Any method of voluntary registration is certain to be incomplete, on the one hand, and padded, on the other hand. Many people actively in search of work will not bother to fill out registration cards for a general census, particularly if they are already on the books of an employment agency. The failure of millions to register on the given day under the social security act, when it was obviously to their advantage to do so, emphasizes the unreliability of voluntary enumeration.

Many who have never been employed or who are actually unemployable, will, however, seize the opportunity to register. And the Communists will miss a good bet if they do not advise their adherents to register several times over with a view to rolling up a total which they would be able to exploit effectively. The net result will be an utterly meaningless figure, significant only as a monument to legislative stupidity.

It was the height of irresponsibility for Congress to pass a measure of this sort without seeking expert opinion in advance. The surmise that the census was intended to provide useless jobs for enumerators is not even tenable, if registration is made purely voluntary with no house to house canvassing. Under the circumstances, the undertaking can only be described as an idiotic enterprise that will do nobody any good, not even the spoliemen. When Mr. John Hamilton cites this bungle as a Republican triumph the case for loud laughter becomes irresistible.

Memo To The Deskbound.

In 1540 Lopez de Cardenas discovered the Grand Canyon. He was the pioneer of the early exploring parties, the first boat trip down the Colorado River, the trails, the cabins and hotels, and finally the airplane excursions over the vast park. In 1901 the first passenger train wound through the canyon. Now cafeterias, garages, telephones and all the so-called conveniences of home mark the spot. Yet man is not content, for there is still strange ground in that territory of which he knows next to nothing. It is called Shiva Temple.

Next month an expedition from the American Museum of Natural History of New York City is setting out to conquer this forbidding plateau, the sheer walls of which have so far discouraged all explorers. Scientists are curious about the design for living there. Do animals roam the dense forests which make a landing from the air impossible? If so, are they anything like those which Conan Doyle's imagination pictured in his "lost world" of South America? Have adventurous chipmunks and squirrels managed to scramble up Shiva's slippery slides to mate with the island-bound? Or have generations of isolation and seclusion made the fauna of the plateau as biologically interesting as the inhabitants of Pitcairn's Island?

It is this very unknown quantity which will make every desk-lubber with an ounce of adventure in his blood wish that he might join the expedition. What matter to him the scientific importance of the quest. It were paradise snow to roam a small world in which there is something left to discover for oneself, without having it first pointed out by billboard, advertising and neon signs.

A Tale Of Two Cities.

Many Americans have visited Shanghai and retain vivid memories of that great metropolis and its busy harbor, crowded with the shipping of every maritime nation. Many Americans also know Madrid, and closing their eyes can recall the splendid hotels and great stores which used to line the Gran Via, as well as the magnificent palaces, art galleries and churches which formerly characterized the Spanish capital.

There are even quite a few of us—Americans are great travelers—who know both Shanghai and Madrid, for all the 10,000 miles that separate them. And to them the current devastation in the two cities comes home with almost sickening force.

The destruction of modern warfare is fortunately an abstraction to most people. Imagination is totally unable to picture the effects of bombs and high-explosive shells unless it can also construct an actual background for the setting. But when the Gran Via and Nanking Road can both be visualized, and when the effect of a huge shell bursting on the busiest F street corner is superimposed, a faint shadow of what is now actually happening in the world will come to mind.

A mind touched even by the wing of such a shadow is not likely to harbor any great optimism for the future of our civilization. The World War, for all its terrible toll of life, did little damage to any human art heap. A few long-range shells fell in Paris; a few bombs were dropped on London. But in either case the total loss of life was less than that caused by the single shell which burst squarely in the heart of Shanghai's International Settlement yesterday. Two decades ago war did not really come home to civilians. Today, as shattered Madrid and burning Shanghai testify, the great cities are the first objectives of the military commands.

This development of modern warfare has been anticipated, and pictured with appalling clarity, by such prophets as H. G. Wells in his "Shape of Things to Come." But people would not believe it in the past. Probably, except for those living in Madrid or Shanghai, they will not believe it now. It is as well that there are limits to the human ability to appreciate inhumanities.

Yet this tale of two cities is only a dress rehearsal for what everyone knows may happen on a widespread scale. Technically China and Japan are not even at war, while the strife in Spain is written off as a civil conflict, concerning only the people of that country. The clear desire everywhere is to minimize the underlying significance of what is happening; to regard neutrality or an ostrich-like pacifism as a safeguard, to pretend, since the real situation is too appalling, that actually events are less serious than they seem.

The crumbling walls of Madrid and Shanghai bury more than the innocent victims of man's insensate lust for power. They are also burying the false optimism which believes that the present course of civilization is upward and that warfare of undreamed ghastliness can be averted by any application of the rule of reason.

Ten thousand miles apart two great cities are vanishing into rubbish heaps. There is no pretense of rational justification for such organized madness. So the spectacle must be taken at face value as a warning and a portent. By the light of the flickering flames in Shanghai and Madrid mankind can see, though through a glass darkness, how close to the abyss the present generation trends.

The Merchant Marine Program.

At the personal request of Chairman Kennedy of the Maritime Commission an item of $10,000,000, previously allocated to that body for immediate expenditure, was eliminated from the third deficiency bill. As finally adopted the legislation carried an authorization of $115,000,000 for the construction of new merchant ships.

Mr. Kennedy's unusual action in voluntarily surrendering the cash fund offered him was really a prudent protection against careless spending. The shipping industry is thoroughly demoralized and the commission is now engaged in making a comprehensive survey of conditions preliminary to embarking upon a long-range construction program. Until it is able to appraise the cost of building new vessels more closely, Mr. Kennedy says that not a single contract will be let or a keel laid.

Because of this attitude it was false economy for Congress to cut the original $150,000,000 authorization for the Maritime Commission to the $115,000,000 finally granted. The larger sum, together with funds already available and sums contributed by subsidized private companies, would just about cover the probable cost of the Maritime Commission's construction program. That calls for the building of 95 vessels during the next three years at an estimated outlay of $265,000,000. An "adequate" replacement program would, in Mr. Kennedy's opinion, require an expenditure of $520,000,000 during the next five years.

Under the circumstances, nothing was gained by an arbitrary reduction in the authorization to spend under contracts still to be made. It certainly has not reduced the amount of money required to rebuild our merchant marine in accordance with the plans of the Maritime Commission. On the other hand, it may actually hamper the working out of plans by creating doubts as to the willingness of Congress to support the commission.

The tentative cost estimates, though large, do not seem excessive in view of the backward state of development of the American merchant marine. Today the United States is a bad fourth among the six leading maritime nations in respect to tonnage, being outranked 5 to 1 by Great Britain. Moreover, nearly 90 per cent of our tonnage will be obsolete within the next five years, having reached or exceeded the 20-year age limit.

The American people seemingly desire to have a modern merchant marine, able to carry a substantial part of our sea-borne commerce in peace times and to provide a needed naval auxiliary force in the event of war. If that demand is to be satisfied the Government will undoubtedly have to make heavy outlays. The task assigned to the commission is to get maximum returns from each dollar spent and to try to spend so wisely as to attract private capital into the industry. Mr. Kennedy has given ample indication that his chairmanship will attain that objective if Congress does its part.

A Chronic Emergency?

Due to catastrophic declines in prices of farm products, farm income dropped to the pitifully low figure of $4,300,000,000 in 1932. The resultant destruction of farmer purchasing power created a very serious situation which the incoming Roosevelt Administration sought to meet by passage of the Agricultural Adjustment Act. The public was led to believe that with the passing of the emergency this experimental system of subsidization and production control would be abandoned and the country would return to a system of free agriculture with prices competitively fixed.

Today the farm population is more prosperous than it has been at any time since 1929. The Department of Agriculture estimates cash farm income for the present year at $9,000,000,000. That is still $1,479,000,000 short of the returns of 1929, and if benefit payments, estimated at from $400,000,000 to $450,000,000, are deducted from current estimates the showing would be slightly less favorable. But even so agricultural recovery is clearly far advanced. Moreover, the ratio of prices paid to prices received by farmers is close to pre-war parity—the alleged goal of the AAA program.

The expected increase in farm income this year, estimated at something more than $1,000,000,000 over 1936, is attributed by the Department of Agriculture "almost entirely to the greater income being received from the larger crops this year." Yet the loud lamentations over recent price declines, following the excellent grain and cotton crop forecasts, take no account of these offsetting compensations. Indeed, so far as Congress is concerned, the original emergency which gave rise to demands for price pegging and subsidies is with us yet. The arrangement whereby the Administration has offered to peg cotton prices through loans and subsidies, in exchange for Congressional promises to pass permanent farm legislation next session, shows that the AAA is by no means forgotten.

Starting with efforts to raise abnormally depressed prices, we have advanced to the point at which demands are being made for maintenance of high prices through the aid of Government loans and subsidies. If such demands are to be satisfied, production control becomes an inevitable corollary. Otherwise, the cost of subsidization would soon prove prohibitive. From present indications, therefore, Congress and the Administration are in league to saddle the country with a permanent system of agricultural production control modeled along familiar lines.

The prospect is the less welcome because of actual experiences under the AAA. The export market for our cotton has already been sharply contracted through the maintenance of prices above world levels. That is one reason why a good crop report creates a panic fear of price collapse and immediate demands for Government price pegging. Once applied to a single crop, or a few crops, moreover, price pegging and subsidization will inevitably spread until in the end the entire agricultural community will find itself subject to centralized control.

Unless we assume that agriculture exists in a condition of chronic emergency, there is no justification for continuing to subject the farmer to the control mechanisms devised in the midst of a real emergency.

After Ten Years.

Yesterday was the tenth anniversary of the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. Echoes of the case are still resounding, and it is well that this is so. There were very reasonable doubts as to the guilt of the two Italian anarchists in the crime of which they were accused, and those doubts still remain. The notoriety of the tragedy has undoubtedly sharpened minds which might otherwise never have been properly awakened to the ease with which political and economic prejudices can creep into the courts.

But at least it must be said that the Nation has taken the case of Sacco and Vanzetti seriously. Seven years of trial and reviews were allowed the men. Ten years after their execution it is even proposed to erect a monument to their memory.

The irony of it is that some of those who feel most strongly on the subject are also quick to condone the biased justice which is the rule in other countries. There the victims of political trials over the last decade are numbered in thousands. And there a proposal for their commemoration would be promptly met by further firing squads.

And then there was the king who swapped his kingdom for a clothes-horse.

The Canadian courts picked up a man who had been supporting nine wives for a number of years and sent him to jail—instead of pinning a medal on him.

A physician says that only highly intelligent persons have hay fever. Nevertheless, we still think it's a foolish thing to do.

Letters to the Editor

Carving Mountains.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been wondering about the idea of converting the mountains into gigantic heads, like the ones of Washington, Lincoln and Jefferson now being completed out West.

To me they are but little better than billboards, but unlike billboards, they cannot be removed. The fact that they advertise great Americans makes little or no difference. I have not seen these carvings except in the newspapers, but do not believe seeing them in person would make me change my mind. A single mountainside, however scrubby it might be, would please me more than even a statue by Rodin carved out of the same mountainside. I admire and like to look at sculpture in art galleries, but do not like to run into them adorning the scenery.

Between the massive heads in one state, the elaborate prehistoric monsters in another, I wonder what is coming next. How about a motion picture at Niagara Falls using the falling water as a screen? A few million brightly decorated and painted garden figures would go nicely into the Grand Canyon and make it worthwhile looking at. Even our own cherry blossoms would look a lot better if we strung the trees with tinels, or pruned them into the shape of animals.

If we don't run out of mountains, we may look forward to all our great Americans having their likenesses carved out of solid rock. An outside Hall of Fame! Look at all the fun we would have with a poll where everyone could vote for who he thinks should be carved out next.

Washington, August 20.

Invitation To Mr. Stinger.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is an answer to Gilbert Stinger's "Sunday at Manassas."

Ask Mr. Stinger to come back to Manassas as our guest. Tell him to bring his best girl with him. We shall be delighted to show them the many things of great interest to the people of Washington, and the entire country.

Many are the families in the United States whose thread of gold runs through Manassas. There were many vacant chairs in many homes, because Manassas was here three-quarters of a century ago. Come out some time and get that story. Come out and let us start at Delvington and go down through Mount Vernon, Alexandria, Valley Forge, Yorktown, the first and second battles of Manassas. Come and talk with some of the people whose forebears took a prominent part in these great historical events.

The Post And Its Opinions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Did you ever eat fried chicken? I suppose, on this score, all men are brothers.

Now you cannot have fried chicken, ordinarily, unless someone commits the bloody act of severing its head from its body of ye aforesaid chicken. This act have I done many times.

I have observed that after the chicken has been decapitated, he tries to go higher and yon, in all directions. It is as though his muscles, his bones, and his sinews were as good as severed. I give you the news—nothing else but—and not of that of some portentous matters. It is a printing press without a soul. It is like a chicken with its head cut off.

But The Post—three cheers—it has opinions. It stands for something. I like it. My parent used to say, "Be a man, a mouse, or a long-tailed rat, but be something." This is a time when the people need leadership and when forces which seek to destroy us strive mightily by falsehood, propaganda, and every political trick to keep sensible people from the union they know is bound to eventuate.

Mr. Meeks deplores that you took a stand on the seating of Senator Black. I suppose he regrets similarly your important statement on the new political slavery of which we have the third example in the appointment by a governor of his own wife to the Senate of the United States.

It seems that you are criticized by Senator Nye for having an opinion on the neutrality act. He charges you, in effect, with saying that Japan started the troubles in the East. He would condemn me, when I say we had better, with modern mechanized equipment, lose ten thousand or more good American respectable Christians, and let the Japanese butcher a couple of million Chinese whose blood is just as red as ours. But why worry at the censure of a Senator who states that the World War was not started by Germany?

Three cheers for The Post and its opinions! It stands for something. I like it. My parent used to Soul's Course.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With your permission I will answer a question Mr. John N. Quinn asked me in this space the other day.

Question: "A million persons die in China a month—out of Christ. Are these all consigned to eternal flames?"

Answer: As there are no flames eternal or otherwise, to which any soul may be consigned that question is irrelevant and impossible. The door of God's mercy is never shut to his children, whether they lived a thousand years before Christ or a thousand years after.

Every soul, no matter when it lived and operated, was started on its journey by and through the great God-law of love. Man lives in cycles coming into and going out of life, according to the plans and purposes of God concerning his final development. One life of three score and ten years is all too short for him to get all the experience of life he must have for his permanent advancement. In finality, therefore, the soul comes again and again, into the earth life to love, to serve, to give.

No flames retard his onward march. No matter how low he falls, he will eventually rise, and will never be found in so low a state again for he is on his way toward the heights of the soul-world—into perfection.

Embargo For Japan?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I do not understand why the President does not declare an arms embargo against Japan. Indeed, the declaration of long overdue American applied the neutrality embargo against Italy. Why should we not apply the same against Japan?

I am an Italian by birth, though I am now an American citizen. I feel that for some unexplained reason this Nation discriminated against Italy and is now discriminating in favor of Japan. Japan's acts in China are no more justifiable than those of Italy in Ethiopia. Why, then, this discrimination in the invocation of the neutrality act?

Crops And Trade.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This year's bountiful crops of wheat, corn, and cotton, naturally a matter for rejoicing, bring embarrassment and dismay to the New Deal Administration at Washington. Notwithstanding extensive destruction of growing crops at public expense and subsidies of hundreds of millions of dollars to American farmers as a reward for idleness, with rich payments for loss of crops in the arid regions and with money loaned by the Government at far less than the normal rate of interest, production has been so excessive that the Government, to be consistent, will now have to purchase the excess crops at fancy prices and possibly to destroy a large portion of them by dumping in mid ocean.

Had our brain trusters studied political economy instead of economics while at college, their first recommendation would have been free trade with all nations. This would take care of surplus crops. They would also have known that to favor any one industry with subsidies and special privileges at the expense of the taxpayer, is the surest way to attract more men into it and in that way to aggravate, instead of remedy the economic disease.

Supplementing high protective duties on agricultural products, it is now seriously proposed to aid tenant farmers by providing them with money with which to become land owners. This will have the logical effect of still further enhancing the price of land, which is already held at artificially high prices. Another vicious circle is thereby started. Meanwhile we are rapidly losing foreign markets for our surplus wheat, corn, and cotton.

Civil Service Salaries.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his address commemorating the birth of Virginia Dare, the President quotes with approval the saying of a famous statesman, "I respect the aristocracy of learning I deplore the plutocracy of wealth, but thank God the democracy of the heart." If the President thoroughly understands and approves the social and economic philosophy that permeates this statement, he should undertake in real earnest a distribution of income on the basis of personal need. The whole civil service policy is based upon the principle of plutocracy as is evident in the salary schedule which ranges from less than $1,000 to nearly $10,000 per annum. The President has the power to reduce the civil service pay scale—that is an educational aid—basis and to revise the pay schedule accordingly. This is an imperative moral duty and would accomplish the following results: Reduce the cost to the taxpayers, permit an increase of personnel without increased cost, and eliminate the vast excesses and inequalities which are too obvious in civil service.

The abolition of plutocracy means equality or near equality of income and the adoption of such a principle in the Government service would be a precedent in economy and social righteousness for other employers.

Sutherland And Black.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You state that Sutherland "holds the degree of doctor of laws from three great universities," but you neglected to add that they are "honorary" degrees—a dime a dozen anywhere in America. To prove that they are tossed about indiscriminately, I point mutely to that great intellectual, Senator J. J. (The Workingman's Friend) Davis, the proud recipient of a half dozen of these academic kisses.

I question, too, your pontifical implication that the president, of the American Bar Association automatically made a Solomon out of a Sutherland.

So far as Black's "police court judgeship" is concerned, I respectfully suggest that five of his frozen confederates-to-be take 18 months off and hold down a similar job. It might bring them in closer touch with the people they are supposed to serve.

The Two Men.

THEIR table was next to ours in the ship's dining saloon. They were old men—and yet, they were young. They were old from their work; from the strain of many years of surgery in some Midwestern city. Their skin was assuming the waxen hue of age, stretching itself tighter across the bones, etching in sharper relief the tiny blood vessels beneath it.

They had to walk with precision, and grope, like children, for chairs and handrails when the boat began to toss. Their digestions were failing. They could not eat what they wanted. I can hear them prescribing for one another at mealtime. "No, Doc, not the roast duck." And, "Bill, would just a little 'ft of that steak and French fries hurt me?"

I was told they had retired from practice eight or nine years ago, and started out to see the world. Like twin stars, loose from their orbit, these two bachelors had wandered from corner to corner of the earth, dipping into remote places, crossing strange seas, searching out joyously the mysteries of foreign lands that are forever hidden to most people.

Bill was a little younger than his friend, a little more intense. He had an affectionate way of saying "Doc," an earnestness about his conversation, and a way of leaning on the table and smiling into Doc's eyes that captured my attention, and set loose my fancy.

What had brought these two men together? Piecemeal glimpses through the years seemed to tell me . . .

Two young medical students were peering down laboratory microscopes, working together beneath a gas lamp, scribbling in the hush of a large examination hall . . . swaying homeward in the misty hours of a Sunday morning.

Then there were two white-clad internes scurrying down the corridors of a great hospital, plunging first into one ward and then another, talking quickly of "sutures," and "hypos," and "ice-compresses." Later, doctor's offices: Doc and Bill leaning across desks, chins on hands, boring into the minds of the patients . . .

"Now, Mrs. Smith, the plates show, ah, a slight discoloration in the upper anterior portion of the femur . . ."

"Yes, we could operate. Yes, it has been performed successfully a number of times. There is Dr. Addison, of Minneapolis . . ."

There was a succession of operating rooms, blue globes hung low from the ceilings, nurses forming a ring about the table, Doc or Bill (sometimes both at once) working deftly with their fingers, giving rapid asides . . .

"Cut . . . swab . . . a little closer . . . hum, just as I thought; look here . . . cautery . . . dressing . . ."

Always it seemed that Doc was the wiser, the steadier of the two. That Bill placed an almost filial trust in him. Throughout their youth and the moments before examinations, the forgettings which followed; and, later, in the crisis of a case, in the consultation of many doctors, Doc's image was foremost, listening, restraining, finally giving the awaited opinion.

My most enduring impression of the pair is that of their daily visit with the ship's barber. They would wander into his saloon about tea-time, and lie back on the long leather seat beneath the porthole. Bill would light a cigar, and presently Doc would start talking, gradually unwinding to his slim audience tales of his rich past . . .

We were in the China Sea that trip, en route to Kelung. Well, sir, the cargo caught fire . . . old tub burned like kindling . . . we were adrift in a leaky lifeboat for five days. One morning . . . we were all sick then, every man of us, and three coolies, mind you, had already died and been chucked overboard . . . one morning we saw a hazy, ragged line looming up on the horizon. No, it wasn't a mirage—we thought it was at first; we'd had experience with mirages before. Well, sir, I steadied myself on Bill's shoulder and stood up on my weak pins, and shouted, loud and clear, "Pull, men, pull for all you're worth: if it kills you . . . pull!"

A Few Reminiscences.

You wake up on a 2-below-zero morning in February. Snow has drifted through the open window. You struggle into your galoshes, wrap a woolen scarf round your neck, pull on your heavy overcoat, tuck your ears under your hat, pull on your gloves and start off to work.

A block from the door, your fingers feel frozen, your nose is red, your ears blue. You slip on an icy sidewalk, land in a snow drift. As you, bruised and sore, you think about how nice it will be when summer comes.

And now you're complaining about the heat!

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Aug. 23. SYLVIA SIDNEY is back in her old home town for a long spell, ready to begin stage work for the Theater Guild in Ben Hecht's new play, "To Quilt and Back," and extraordinarily happy about it all.

For the little native New Yorker much prefers the roaring highways of home to the Southern California where she has had her greatest success.

At present Sylvia is enjoying singlehood—she has her dachshund, Strudel, after apple-cake—in an apartment in the old Joseph Pulitzer mansion on East Seventy-third street. While Strudel constantly performs his sole trick, sitting up, Sylvia speaks freely. She is still heaven's choicest gift to the designers of suits—no one I know wears them better, or looks nicer in exquisitely casual tailored clothes.

The small Sylvia, graduate of dear old Public School No. 3, down in Greenwich Village, has recently finished her leading chore in the melodrama "Dead End," which ran on Forty-fourth street here for a year or more.

She tells me that every time she is ready to do a rough-and-ready film of New York life, something dire happens. Before "Dead End" she fell against a mirror table-top, suffering a cut face and a brain concussion. No scars show, thank goodness. When she was about to start "Street Scene" she busted an ankle. Perhaps these personal catastrophes have soured her on Hollywood. They well might. On Broadway nothing but her feelings have been hurt—and those very seldom.

So little Sidney is back with us again—a great addition to our thriving little city. I hope "To Quilt and Back" runs at least an aeon!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Speaking of movie stars—and why, pray, not?—Miriam Hopkins caused a minor sensation, launching on the Viennese Roof of the St. Regis the other day by the effect of her lack of make-up. Her eyes were as natural, with the lashes as blonde as her pate. She looked handsome in black and white with all that bloneness—white fez for top-piece, and black accessories.

We lose an especially interesting story-teller in the death of Edith Wharton at 75 in her adopted country, France. True, the youngsters, as is their wont, poked scorn at her as a literary figure, but she wrote a few fine jobs, notably "Ethan Frome." Let the critical infants too it. Wharton began life as a society girl here—and how the so-called "400" grew to fear and dislike her as she put them into her books—hide, hair and hooves! It has always been believed that the great love of her life was the now almost legendary Henry James.

Heavy odds are being laid here by the wise observers against the marriage of our Junior Glamour baby, "Honey" Johnson, to the last of the marrying Midwinters, Dave. The social railbirds point out that her papa is a strong-minded gent in the contracting business who would be unfavorably impressed by any dubious continental alliance, and that Pop will have to okay the fateful wedding band that goes on "Honey's" finger.

Ever since the death of Marjorie Oelrichs Duchin, young wife of the popular band leader, Eddy, her mother has been protected, with grief, by a generous friend, Mrs. Aymer Johnson, has requested her at her Newport home, where the bereaved mother can rest and restore herself.

Sylvia Gubern, the only girl in our Weather Bureau and a climate-predictor at all, is lecturing at the Fashion Academy. Wonder if she can tell the ski-suit makers how they are going to make out this year? Good trick if she does it.

Learn Dancing at Home

HIDING out in the dressing room? Furtively powdering her nose to the latest wait time? Facing the stage line with a desperate smile? Life! No pathetic little wallflower dodges for this lucky girl. She's a miracle of floating motion in the new Canter. No wonder all the stage cut in.

This popular girl doesn't rely on her natural lightness and sense of rhythm alone to make her a good follower. She actually learns the new steps from easy diagrams. She practices them until they're almost instinctive.

In the Canter step, starting with the left foot, she takes two walking steps back, of exactly the same length. But the first step is quick, down to one count of music. The second is slow, takes two counts. Then she skirts through the regulation old-fashioned waltz step—1. Step back on left foot, 2. diagonally back on the right, 3. close left to right foot.

When the orchestra swings into the rumba, she panics the stage line again with the graceful hip sway and rhythmic knee action that makes this popular dance a joy to watch. She knows the turns, too, that give variety to the exotic rumba.

There's no need to stay in wallflower row when easy home practice can put you on the road to popularity.

Frocks for School Girls
Cut to Be Glamorous

New York (AP)—Frocks to "go places" after school are cut to give the school girl glamour. Since most girls want at least one black one (despite mothers' protests), there are many black crepe afternoon frocks designed with the fitted corsetlike waistline and shirred bodice effect. Gold accents—masks, mesh bows or cock's heads—and colored metal trims give them zip. The sleeves generally are just a little longer than elbow length.

Colored velvet or crepe make dresses for the girl who doesn't want black.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Sensitive, Self-Conscious, With No Intimate Friends,
Girl Asks How to Keep 'Chin Up.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I hardly know how to put my situation before you. So many have written you on this subject but none of your answers seem to apply exactly to my need. I have an inferiority complex and I am very sensitive but don't show it, which is worse than if I did. I have never learned the fundamentals of having a good time nor learned to play for play's sake. Because of lack of money, I have never gone out much. I have had little opportunity to meet young persons here except those at church, at work, and where I stay, and among those I have met there have been none with whom I would care to become intimate.

I am a person who has one intimate friend at a time and that seems enough. I am afraid I do not know how to have a light friendship with a group of girls. As for young men, I just don't know how to treat them or talk with them. I had good times with boys before I reached the age when girls begin having dates; but after that it was all off. Can you tell me—are there any young men nowadays who are interested in friendship with girls, without petting or any strings attached? I just can't tolerate a petting party with a man the first time I go out with him. If that seems to be expected, the evening is ruined for me before it starts. Pick-up dates are out of the question, for me; and I have found blind dates rather risky. The blind date seems to expect just as much affectionate intimacy with the new girl, as the other man enjoys with the girl he's been going with regularly.

Since I make a small salary and have to contribute to the support of my parents, I cannot afford those activities which might help me overcome my loneliness and timidity. There are, of course, any number of things you might suggest but all of them will be too expensive, I'm sure. I love motoring and I love the countryside, but I have been denied both since coming here. That, I think, is the principal reason for this outburst. Along with everything else, I expect to lose my job soon, so if you can give me any suggestions for keeping my chin up and making my situation happier, I shall appreciate it more than I can say. Sincerely yours, M. L.

Right Mental Attitudes.

DEAR M. L.: You are suffering from a definite psychology. You not only admit, but you insist, that you're licked before you start, and that nothing can be done about it. That is the worst possible mental approach to bring to the solution of any problem, large or small. The first principle of having a good time is to forget one's self through striving to make others happy. Instead of sizing up everybody you meet with an eye to what they may have to contribute to you, why not look them over with an eye to what you can do for them?

If the gay, polished, popular people pass you by without a glance, start cultivating the retiring, neglected, ill-at-ease, not-so-magnetic men and women. Underneath you may discover truly lovable personality and worth-while character, and set in motion a chain of events which will bring a wealth of romance and adventure in its wake. Since you don't care to make "intimates" of whomever you meet at work, at church and at your lodging place, make pleasant acquaintances of them instead. Set yourself the task of becoming the best-liked person of the lot. This is easily done. Show a real interest in everyone. Lead him (or her) into a discussion of his work, his childhood, his future plans and ambitions, and make a habit of showing a sympathetic, though non-prying concern, in the progress of his affairs. Everybody's life and problems seem tremendously important to himself, and nothing so endears another person to him as to believe that other person regards them as equally important.

Stop fretting about not having an intimate girl friend or a best beau. Whatever capacity for friendship you possess can be better developed through group association than through lavishing it on one person. Whoever wants and is content with one "intimate friend" is, frankly speaking, looking for a pillar to lean on. He wants to be relieved of the responsibility of standing on his own feet, socially. In a measure, he wants to own the other person and through him (or her) lead vicariously a larger social existence.

Two things I advise you to do, though you may have to economize on lunches, manicures and movies to do so—and that is, learn to play bridge and to dance well. Stay-at-home evenings can be made very enjoyable with a session at cards well played; and a girl just can't expect to be invited out of evenings by young men if she doesn't dance and dance well. Incidentally, just the other day a girl dropped into my office to consult me about a "heart problem." Until she started taking dancing lessons a few months ago, she was leading a lonely and neglected existence. Now she has several beaux, goes out frequently and is deeply interested in a certain young man. There's a moral in that for you.

The other day a new book by David Seabury came to my desk. It is called "Helping Yourself to Happiness," and will be in the bookstalls shortly. If it isn't already on sale, I hope it is. The author has a lot of tremendously helpful advice to offer to persons like yourself. He shows plainly that an inferiority complex is nothing to brag about; in fact, it's just about as unnecessary as a stomach ache. It afflicts persons who think too much, and, in fact, almost entirely, about themselves. The cure seems to lie in realizing the fact that nearly everybody suffers from the same complaint to greater or lesser degree, and in helping others to feel important, admired and indispensable, pretty soon you find yourself a sought-after person with more claims on your time than you can easily fulfill.

Don't give up on the "blind-date" arrangement, if that's the only way you have of meeting men. But next time you try it, devote yourself not to defending yourself from the man's attentions, but to making him feel witty, wise and wonderful. I maintain that no woman capable of sustaining a cheerful flow of light conversation; or even, occasionally, conversation of a deeper trend, ever has to fend off objectionable advances from a properly introduced man. However, when a woman on a party is consistently uncommunicative, her partner usually figures there's nothing else to do to while away the time except make love. Sometimes, indeed, he thinks she expects it; that that's what she's waiting for.

New Furs Flatter the Figure By Losing Bulky Appearance

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

FURS HAVE REACHED the epitome of smart styling. The newest models, as shown in the August fur sales, flatter the figure rather than give it the effect of bulk as in former seasons. The main reason for this revolutionary change is that furs now are treated as fabrics in their designing. In fact, they are inspired by the latest dictates of Paris in regard to cloth coats, and emulate their lines and details. It is all brought about by the clever manipulation of the fur pelts. The new pliability is also responsible for the numerous new methods in chic designing.

Three distinct lengths are sponsored by both Paris and New York: the short and chunky "briker," the seven-eighths, and the long. However, fur coats of any length imaginable, from an ultrashort bolero to floor length for formal evening, are in evidence. Silhouettes are almost as numerous as lengths. There is the pencil silhouette front with swaggy back as originated by Molyneux; the fitted and belted styling; the loosely fitted yet sleek seven-eighths or three-fourths coat with tuxedo front; the youthful boxy silhouette.

The squared-shoulder lines and loose sleeves give a slenderizing effect to the hips. Collars are small and add chic to the new fur coat creations. They include small tunnel collars, trim Johnny collars, those which are narrow and criss-crossed and turtle neck effects. Revers when used at all are small around the face and then ripple into slimming lines over the bosom. The majority of fur coats this season are devoid of contrasting fur trimming, depending upon their own smart lines and rich furs for a luxurious effect.

Black Leads Color Chart.
Black is getting the most attention at present, but brown is rapidly coming to the fore, due to the vogue for brown Persian lamb, and sable dyed kolinsky. Safari brown sealskin is also in the spotlight in both short and long versions. Gray, not much in evidence at the beginning of the fall openings, is gaining surprising popularity, especially squirrel, opossum, Persian and kidskin. Beaver has appeared, after an absence of several seasons, in a new lightweight pelt. In the realm of black, there are the Persian lambs, Hudson seal, caracul, and the less expensive galyak, lapin and kid.

Long-haired furs have returned to vogue due to the popularity and general becomingness of the short coat. They range from the luxurious silver fox, the less expensive blue fox, and the ultrapopular and effective skunk to the opossums and raccoons.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"YOUR RECENT advice to another reader suggesting aquamarine walls with a mulberry broadloom rug attracted me very much," writes a lady who wants a bit of counsel on redecorating her own living room. "I would like a similar color scheme, built around a mulberry broadloom. I need help in adapting it to my layout. I shall buy a new sofa, two upholstered chairs and a third occasional chair. With these pieces, in eighteenth century English design, I shall use two other old chairs with new slip covers on them."

What colors and fabrics would you suggest for the large pieces? And what for walls and draperies? As the room is not large, I want to avoid an overpatterned effect and yet have something interesting. This room opens on the dining room where I have a good American Oriental rug with soft greens, beiges and tones of mulberry. I am keeping the old furniture, which is walnut. What would you suggest for draperies and walls? What about Venetian blinds in both rooms? Both the living room and dining room have triple windows which should lend themselves to unusual treatment.

We'd do the wall of both living room and dining room in the same aquamarine tone. And treat the windows alike, too. Venetian blinds painted that same aquamarine would be our suggestion. Then draperies of pale café au lait taffeta sweeping rather grandly to each side with mirror cornices and tie backs. For the big upholstered pieces that must set out in the floor a way, we'd have a mulberry damask, tapestry or rep covering. . . this color will Persian lamb in a clever fitted and belted model. The squared shoulders, comfortable sleeves and tiny collar are important style notes. The Persian bag and hat trimming stress the trend toward fur as an accent.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

Speech Disorders.

The study of speech disorders, such as stuttering and stammering, now is in the hands of scientific students. There are institutions in the United States where these patients can be handled with a true regard for their best welfare—where a scientific study of the case will be made, and a sympathetic attempt to adjust all the factors—emotional, physical, environmental—in the causation of the disorder for the purpose of effecting a cure.

This is certainly a contrast to the conditions which prevailed in the days of stuttering schools, where they could think of nothing but drills over and over again, with the general impression prevailing that the stutterer was a bad child who was being punished.

A recent report by Dr. James S. Greene, of the National Hospital for Speech Disorders in New York, gives an insight into the causes of speech disorders.

The largest number of patients treated at the institute are stutterers, but stuttering is not the basic for all forms of speech disorders. Dr. Greene distinguishes between stuttering and stammering. Stuttering is labored, difficult, hesitant speech which results in defective conversation. Stammering is a defect in articulation. Stammering depends on defective performance, while stuttering results from emotional disturbances.

Certain speech defects are definitely due to the persistence of infantile habit, misguidedly encouraged by the parents. Thus lalling and other forms of baby talk are considered by Dr. Greene to be caused mainly by environment. Talking baby talk to children, and imitating their own speech because it is so cute, can be carried on so long that they come to have a mutilated speech which is carried on into adult life when it sounds far from cute. If a child has the slightest constitutional tendency to speech defect, nothing is more likely to convert it into a speech defect than to have them but to no one else.

No one would want to interfere with the happiness of young parents in enjoying their children in this way, but there comes a time when it is definitely too late to continue it. It is possible in a family of three or four children of about the same age for them to develop a language entirely intelligible to them but to no one else.

Lisping is an infantile poor speech habit carried over into adult life. It is not due to any physical defect in the tongue-tongue tie—but entirely to habit formation.

Similar to lisping is the nasal inaccurate speech in which the palate does not close off the nasal cavity during speech. The soft palate hangs loose in ordinary breathing, but in speaking all sounds except the nasals—m, n, ng, p—move upwards almost entirely closing the nasal from the mouth cavity. This form of speech may be due to physical causes—not only cleft palate, but adenoids and injuries following tonsil operations.

Legislators To Travel on U. S. Vessel

La Follette, Mrs. Jenckes, Guffey Among Those Off for Europe.

Congressional Tourists Will Sail on Washington From N. Y. Tomorrow.

When the good ship Washington leaves her moorings at New York's North River tomorrow, there will be a distinguished group of vacationing legislators aboard. Like most Senators and Congressmen, they chose American boats rather than the more luxurious Normandie or Queen Mary, for their European voyage.

On board as the Washington poses her way out into the Atlantic will be Senator and Mrs. Robert La Follette, of Wisconsin. They are going first to Paris and will then make a tour of the Scandinavian countries, returning to the United States in a month or six weeks. They will then go to their Wisconsin home until Congress convenes again.

The only woman Congress ever elected to send to the annual Interparliamentary Conference will also be on board en route to the meeting. She is Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, who also happens to be the only college graduate among the lady Representatives and Senators.

These conferences are held annually—the last one was in Bucharest, and it will be remembered that Senator Burton K. Wheeler and his daughter, Mrs. Edwin Coleman, attended it. This year's delegates will meet in Paris, which will allow them an opportunity of seeing the exposition. The purpose of the conference is to promote friendship between governments and to discuss the problems common to all countries.

Representative Jenckes expects to return to the United States September 30. Senator Joseph Guffey and his two sisters, the Misses Ida and Pauline Guffey, will also sail on the Washington for a visit to Poland, Norway, and several other countries. They are at present at the Ambassador Hotel in New York. Their stay abroad will be of indefinite length.

Also vacation-bound, although in the opposite direction from the Washington crowd, are Senator and Mrs. William G. McAdoo. They are leaving for their summer home at Santa Barbara in the Senator's home, the S. S. California. Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin will go to their home in Burlington, Vt., and Senator Millard Tydings will join the Tydings in Oakington, Md., Maryland country place. They will remain there through September, anyway.

Representative William I. Sirovich returned to New York yesterday on the Queen Mary after a tour through Europe. V. A. L. Mallet, Counselor of the British Embassy here, was also a passenger. He is returning after a vacation at his home near Bath, England.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney will arrive at Saratoga to join Mr. Whitney at their estate there for the final week of the racing season. She has been in Hollywood taking screen tests for a proposed movie which will have a society-facing plot.

Among recent arrivals at the Greenbrier in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., are Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Smith, Mrs. Frances G. McEwen, and Roland H. Allen, all of Washington.

Mrs. Charles O. Miller and Miss Gladys Coffinger, of Pontiac, Mich., have arrived in Washington and are at the Shoreham. They expect to remain in the city for a week.

Col. C. J. Miller, of Quantico, Va., was the week-end guest of Lieut. Col. A. J. Drexel Biddle and Mrs. Biddle at the Carlton Hotel. Col. and Mrs. Biddle entertained at luncheon Saturday afternoon in the main dining room of the Carlton.

Charles Martin, Bride on Tour

Eleanor Margaret Hunter Married at Anacostia Methodist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Joyce Martin, who were married on Saturday in the personage of the Anacostia Methodist Episcopal Church, are now in Atlantic City on their wedding trip. The bride is the former Miss Eleanor Margaret Hunter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Barrowman Hunter, and Mr. Martin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip J. Martin. The Rev. John Fort performed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin will live in Washington. The bride wore a white embroidered lace redingote gown and carried a bouquet of lilies and white gladioli.

Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Ruth Elizabeth Hunter, who wore a powder blue frock of mousseline de soie with pink accessories and a large leghorn hat. She carried a bouquet of pink gladioli and asters.

Albert Martin served as his brother's best man. Immediately following the ceremony a large wedding reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 1110 Ramo street. The house was decorated with palms. Mrs. John Barrowman Hunter, the bride's mother, received the guests, wearing a long pink chiffon dress and a shoulder corsage of tallman roses.

Engagements Announced With Wedding Plans Next Concern

MISS DOROTHY SHARPE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Melvin Sharpe, of Wesley Heights, is at the right. Her parents have announced her engagement to Dr. M. Russell Edmonston, of Washington. She is making plans for a September wedding. Below is Miss Muriel Hite, whose engagement to Charles Lewis Follansbee, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lewis Follansbee, of Eufaula, Okla., is announced by her mother, Mrs. Charles Jackson Hite.

2 Engagements Party Planned Are Announced For Vinson Boys

Miss Dorothy Sharpe and Miss Muriel Hite Will Be Wed.

TWO BETROTHALS of interest to Washington society were announced yesterday by the parents of the brides-to-be. Mr. and Mrs. C. Melvin Sharpe, of 2930 Forty-fifth street, Wesley Heights, announced the engagement of their daughter, Dorothy Evelyn, to Dr. M. Russell Edmonston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sherwood Edmonston, of Georgetown.

The wedding will take place in September, although no date has been fixed. Miss Sharpe attended private schools in Philadelphia and was graduated from Wilson Teachers College. She has been teaching in the public schools in Washington. Her fiancé was graduated from Georgetown University.

Mrs. Charles Jackson Hite, of this city, announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Muriel Hite, to Charles Lewis Follansbee, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lewis Follansbee, of Eufaula, Okla. The marriage will take place on September 8 in Washington.

Miss Hite attended Arlington Hall Junior College and previously spent several years in Europe, attending school at the Cours Sainte Clotilde in Paris, France. Mr. Follansbee attended the University of Oklahoma at Norman and will attend Harvard Law School the next three years. They plan to live in Cambridge after their marriage.

Mrs. Colden Back From Tour Abroad

Representative's Wife Leaves for Washington State.

Mrs. Charles Colden, wife of the Representative from California, arrived in Washington on Saturday just before Congress adjourned, and was one of the gallery spectators. Mrs. Colden has returned from an extensive European trip which took her to the Paris exposition and as far north as Scandinavia.

She left Washington again yesterday for Seattle, Wash., where she will visit her mother before joining the Representative in San Pedro, Calif. While in Washington the Coldens made their home at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Absentee Voters To Meet Thursday

Mrs. A. B. Condon, Director, Invites Group to Home.

Mrs. Arthur B. Condon, director general of the Democratic Absentee Voters' Bureau, has issued cards of invitation for a social and business meeting on Thursday evening at her home, Mrs. S. Jennings Ashby, who is chairman of the absentee voters' group of the Democratic Women's National Council and also is in charge of the bureau, will preside at the business session. The reporter plan group of the council, which was to have met last night, has postponed its session until Monday, September 27. Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Woman's Bureau of the Department of Labor, who was to have addressed last night's meeting, will speak before the members of the group next month instead.

Adrienne Tolan And Navy Man Wed on Coast

Lieut. F. P. Kerr Marries Daughter of Representative Tolan.

News has been received of the wedding in Oakland, Calif., on August 10 of Miss Adrienne May Tolan, the daughter of Representative and Mrs. John Harvey Tolan of that city, to Lieut. Francis Patrick Kerr, U. S. N. The ceremony took place at the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, the Rev. Bartholomew Kevany officiating. Only members of the family and a few intimate friends attended.

Representative Tolan was unable to be present, owing to his Congressional duties. In his absence, the bride was given in marriage by her younger brother, George E. Tolan.

She wore her mother's wedding gown of cream-colored silk crepe mousseline, made on long princess lines and trimmed in Duchess point lace. The skirt ended in a long full train and she wore an ivory finger-tip length veil fastened to a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a mother-of-pearl prayer book, her father's gift to her mother, and a strand of pearl rosary beads carried by her sister, Mrs. Conrad Hubner of San Francisco, on her wedding day.

Miss Alma Jean Tolan served as her sister's maid of honor, wearing a frock of Valenciennes lace made of empire style. Her peach colored mullin cap had a starred brim and she carried a bouquet of delphinium.

The altar of the church was decorated with cream colored gladioli arranged in fan-shaped vases and flanked by white tapers in candelabra. James Higgins Kerr, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clement Watson, of Silver Spring, will return the end of the month or the first of September from South Carolina, where they have been vacationing. With their children they motored to Belton, S. C., to visit Mrs. Watson's mother, Mrs. Anna Lattimer, widow of the late Senator Lattimer. Later they took a cottage in the South Carolina mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. James Patton, of Washington, brother-in-law of sister of Mrs. Watson, were also guests of Mrs. Lattimer.

Kappas Plan Celebration For Oct. 13

Alumnae Association to Honor Founders at Banquet.

Mrs. F. A. Rothballe Is Hostess at Meeting to Map Program.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Staff Editor.

Mrs. F. A. Rothballe, president of the Washington Alumnae Association of Kappa Kappa Gamma Women's Fraternity, last night was hostess to other officers of the alumnae group at a meeting called for the discussion of plans for the coming season. The association will give its annual founders' day banquet on October 13, at which Mrs. Rothballe will preside.

Arrangements for the affair are in charge of Mrs. Morton Milford, vice president and social chairman, and members of the active chapters at George Washington and Maryland Universities will attend. The place of the dinner and the speaker of the evening have not been announced. Last year it was given at the Carlton and Miss Ruth Becker, of Baltimore, who was then province president, was guest of honor and addressed the gathering. Miss Frances Wolfe, of Forest Glen, Md., is the newly elected province president.

Other officers of the Washington Alumnae Association, in addition to the president and vice president, are Mrs. Banks Collins, recording secretary; Mrs. A. P. Burgess, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William Eleakney, assistant secretary; Mrs. William Denton, treasurer; Mrs. Anne Waters, assistant treasurer, and Mrs. B. W. Wasser, historian.

Kappa Kappa Gamma, which was founded at Monmouth College, Monmouth, Ill., in 1870, now has 71 active chapters and 131 alumnae associations including those in London, Honolulu and cities in Canada. Of the six founders, two are still living, Mrs. Joseph N. Boyd, of Penny Farms, Fla., and Mrs. W. O. Miller, of Kansas City, Mo.

Local Alumnae Organized in 1924

The local alumnae association, chartered in 1924, has had as its presidents, Mrs. William S. Stein, Mrs. Seiford N. Stillwagen, Mrs. Skipwith Coale, Mrs. Claude S. Watts, Mrs. W. Hamilton Knox, Mrs. Ralph Lawrence, Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, Mrs. Thomas L. Stokes, Mrs. S. W. Davis, Mrs. Edward M. Wallace, Mrs. Edward C. Stone, Helen Hokinson Jones, Mrs. Rollin A. Hunter and, its present head, Mrs. Rothballe.

The student aid fund is one of the oldest in the fraternity, dating back to the early 1900s, when Kappa saw the need for a fund to assist undergraduate students obtain their degrees. The first loan kept in college a senior of DePaul University who was graduated with Phi Beta Kappa honors. Since then many girls have been assisted by this fund. In the depression year of 1933 Kappa aided 42 girls. Last year there were 25 loans made. Other college women as well as members of the fraternity are eligible, if they have successfully completed their first year of college work and can offer satisfactory recommendations.

Although undergraduates have the preference, loans are made for graduate work. The amount is limited to $500 per person, and is advanced monthly as needed. Since the establishment of the chapter at George Washington University in 1926, each year Kappa has aided one of the members of the group to stay in college.

Scholarships Given To Undergraduates

Kappa Kappa Gamma's latest aid to the undergraduate is the establishment of six undergraduate scholarships in 1936. These are awarded annually to initiated members in financial need who are outstanding in some form of campus participation and have a high scholastic rating. They are limited to $250 each and may be used for any necessary school expenses. Appointments are made for one academic year, and not more than one annually to the same chapter.

Kappa Kappa Gamma also awards annually three $500 fellowships. These are open to members of this fraternity, members of other women's fraternities, and nonfraternity women, who have received their bachelors' degree from an institution where a chapter of the fraternity is located. It has been customary to award one fellowship in the field of science, one in some branch of the arts, and one in human relations.

The result of an appeal for help for a Kappa, ill and without funds, was an enthusiastic list of pledges and gifts that in time grew to such proportions that a separate fund was created with a chairman to handle it. Eventually it was given the name of Rose McGill, the Kappa whose need first inspired the fraternity to establish it. Alone except for her fraternity affiliations, without income, and a victim of tuberculosis, she would have been a public charity case had not the spirit of the sisterhood shown itself. The purpose of this fund is to render help in the shape of outright gifts in deserving cases. It may mean hospitalization and a chance to recover health. It may mean helping a widow with small children. It may spell the difference between prosperity and despair for one who has celebrated her fiftieth reunion.

Clubhouse Project Planned by Alumnae

The newest alumnae project was launched at the National convention held in June last year at the Selgriory Club, Canada, the establishment of a clubhouse for Kappas whose college days were completed. The initial step is the

Bank Women's Club Plans Picnic At Rock Creek Thursday Night

Members Will Cook Supper Over Open Fireplace; 65 Who Take Part Prefer to Have Outdoor Meetings in Summer.

A COOKING PICNIC, where the members not only provide part of the supper, but help prepare it over the open fireplace in Rock Creek Park, was planned Thursday night by the Bank Women's Club of Washington. Miss Winifred Burwell, is president of the organization as well as of the Zonta Club.

The club's regular meetings come on the twenty-fifth of each month, carrying out the numeral 25, which has been significant in its history. It was organized 11 years ago, on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the American Institute of Banking, the educational division of the American Bankers Association, with 25 charter members. Its membership was comprised of former members of the local women's committee of the Washington Chapter of the Institute which had been meeting only once a year at the time of the annual convention. The bank women decided to gather more frequently and form a club of their own.

It always has dinner meetings and they continue all the year around. Those in the winter include programs at which speakers of prominence are presented and these in the summer are usually planned out of doors as is that this month. The club's membership has grown to 65.

Three of the members also belong to the Association of Bank Women, a national organization of women bank executives which is to hold its annual convention in Boston, October 8 to 12. Miss Burwell, assistant treasurer of the National Metropolitan Bank, is on the resolutions committee for the Middle-Atlantic Division. Other Washington executives in the national organization are Miss Vera Rhine, of the Morris Plan Bank, and Miss Alice Whitton, of the First National Bank of Alexandria.

Miss Anne Houston Sadler is president of the national association; Miss Mabel D. Robson, vice president; Miss Lillian M. Russ, recording secretary; Miss Mabel F. Thompson, corresponding secretary and Miss Sarah J. MacLeod. Susan B. Sturgis is general convention chairman.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

CUPID has invaded the ranks of law students—or rather former law students—at George Washington University. Oh yes, you may be interested to know who the former students are—their engagement hasn't been formally announced, so perhaps you haven't heard. Well, the bride-to-be is Mabel Olson, blonde and attractive young Washington attorney, who is now with the Public Works Administration, and the prospective bridegroom, Elmer Buckhorn (better known to his friends as "Buck"), who is a patent attorney with the General Electric Co. in Schenectady.

She came to Washington about seven years ago from New Mexico, where she had received her A. B. degree at the State university and was a member of Chi Omega Sorority. After finishing law school at G. W., where she met her future husband, she was admitted to the District bar two years ago and also became a member of the Women's Bar Association and of Kappa Beta Phi, professional legal sorority. The date is September 4.

Friday night, Beatrice Clephane is entertaining members of the George Washington Chapter of Kappa Beta Phi at a farewell party in Miss Olson's honor.

The wedding is to take place at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, in the chapel, with only members of the immediate families and a few close friends in attendance. Mr. Buckhorn and his bride will leave after the ceremony for a month's trip to Quebec and from there will go to Schenectady to make their home. Before coming to Washington to enter George Washington, he was graduated with an A. B. degree from the Oregon State College at Corvallis and was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity. He also belongs to the George Washington Chapter of Phi Delta Phi, legal fraternity.

"PATRONAGE"—The Case Against the Seventy-fifth Congress is the title of a detailed statement issued with a call to action by the president of the National League of Women Voters, Miss Marguerite Wells, on the adjournment of Congress. It is for the purpose of calling attention to the "patronage" of party pledges and party responsibility for abolition of the patronage system.

Mrs. George Gellhorn, chairman of the league's intensive three-year drive in behalf of the merit system, has called on her sub-chairmen throughout the country to organize their State leagues in support of Miss Wells' plan of "constructive indignation."

The League of Women Voters has a way of going about things in a thorough and systematic manner. It spends little time in resolutions and much in direct action. Its statement of its case against Congress quotes the promises of both the Democratic and Republican parties to "extend and improve the merit system" and then lists the names of Senators who voted for the proposed amendment to put all appointees under the hours-wages bill with

The League of Women Voters has a way of going about things in a thorough and systematic manner. It spends little time in resolutions and much in direct action. Its statement of its case against Congress quotes the promises of both the Democratic and Republican parties to "extend and improve the merit system" and then lists the names of Senators who voted for the proposed amendment to put all appointees under the hours-wages bill with salaries more than $4,000 under patronage. That is just one black mark against them.

Other similar measures are listed, and it looks to those who know the league and its non-partisan activities, that members of both parties are likely to hear from the homefolks about the merit system when they get back. And the league (except in the voteless District), is composed of women voters—and SO!

Disabled Veterans' Auxiliary Sponsors Moonlight Cruise as Hospital Benefit

THE WOMEN'S AUXILIARY of the local department of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War is sponsoring, with National Capital Chapter, a moonlight ride and dance on the Steamer Potomac, which will take place next Saturday night. The boat leaves the wharf at Seventh and Water streets at 8:45 o'clock.

Proceeds derived from the ride will be used for the national rehabilitation fund of the auxiliary and to aid patients at Mount Alto and Walter Reed Hospitals.

Members of the auxiliary have played an active part in the social and welfare work of the local D. A. V. unit, including the child welfare program, educational courses and religious and memorial services.

At the next meeting of the auxiliary, at which Mrs. Mary Holt, commander, will preside, a certificate of honor will be presented to the unit by Mrs. Marie Anderson, fourth district national executive committee woman, on behalf of Mrs. Dolly Secord, national commander. The certificate is in recognition of the work of the District auxiliary at the national convention recently held at Columbus, Ohio. The delegation marched in the convention military parade behind a banner presented by Mrs. Suzanne Miller, conductress.

Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Charlotte Tiffany and Mrs. Miller were delegates.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Have you noticed how much cooler it became as soon as Congress went home? ... Overheard on the steps of the Supreme Court Building: "Is it a violation of the Mann act to go from the District of Columbia to Maryland or Virginia? ... Today Roosevelt's bust stands in the room of six vice presidents outside the Senate; but there's doubtless another one of him somewhere."

Best sartorial bet on the Hill: The honorable gentleman who wears a white cutaway palm beach suit, shades of Mark Twain! ... This paragraph will introduce the blond who drives a roadster with District license No. 8717 to any studio in Hollywood.

Among the most earnest letter-writers to Senators on the court bill were Emily Post and Bishop Manning. ... Probably Emily thought the bill was not the correct thing, but the bishop doubtless felt it just wasn't kosher. ... It's after they get home that members of Congress will learn whether there's to be a split in the Democratic Party.

"Emily and the Bishop protested"

Side by side benign Gen. Lee and harassed Jeff Davis stand in the rooms of the Capitol, defying the dam Yankee eternally. ... New Dealers minimize Gov. Lehman's "unpleasant out of all" letter on the court with the explanation that the Governor learned later than anyone else that the great oration for him at the last convention was staged by Jim Farley.

The gallery gods think the short-hand reporters are the hardest working Senators. ... Much of the debate in Congress is in the form of dialogue between an orator and his heckler, with everyone else telling funny stories in groups and diligently paying no attention.

There are some puddles of tears at the Union Station, shed for departing lawmakers. ... Wheeler emerges from the 1937 session as the most important Senator. ... He is the conscience of the Senate and the most effective debater among some grand lingo slingers.

Senator Holt, of West Virginia, resembles a mischievous cupid in specs. ... Many of the House members prefer to eat at the Senate restaurant, where the deficit is bigger. ... Few Senators ever wander over to the House.

The cuspidors are much more obvious in the House, in long gleaming rows. ... It takes a lynchpin debate to evoke any applause in the Senate, and illegal applause from the South-erners in the galleries at that, but the House members often permit themselves a handclap or two at a good quip.

"It rejuvenated the Senate"

Two members of the House attended sessions in a wheel chair. ... Perhaps the deskless Representatives should be provided with breakfast trays in their rooms. ... From above it's plain that at any given time two or three members are studying the comics.

Since the innovation of the direct primary, Senator Nye's shoulders are the squarest in the upper chamber; he has the carriage of an athlete.

The best strawberries in Washington are provided the Senate dining room by Senator Townsend, of Delaware, the "strawberry king". ... Another member provides his legislature with the most luscious watermelons available anywhere in town. ... Perhaps it's true, as a Senator observed, that Representatives really have less to say, but the acoustics are so much better in the lower chamber that it's easier to hear 'em say it. ... Unless my ears deceive me, President Roosevelt's public utterances are still devoid of any reference to the indispensable joys of hard work.

Food Inspections In D. C. Increase

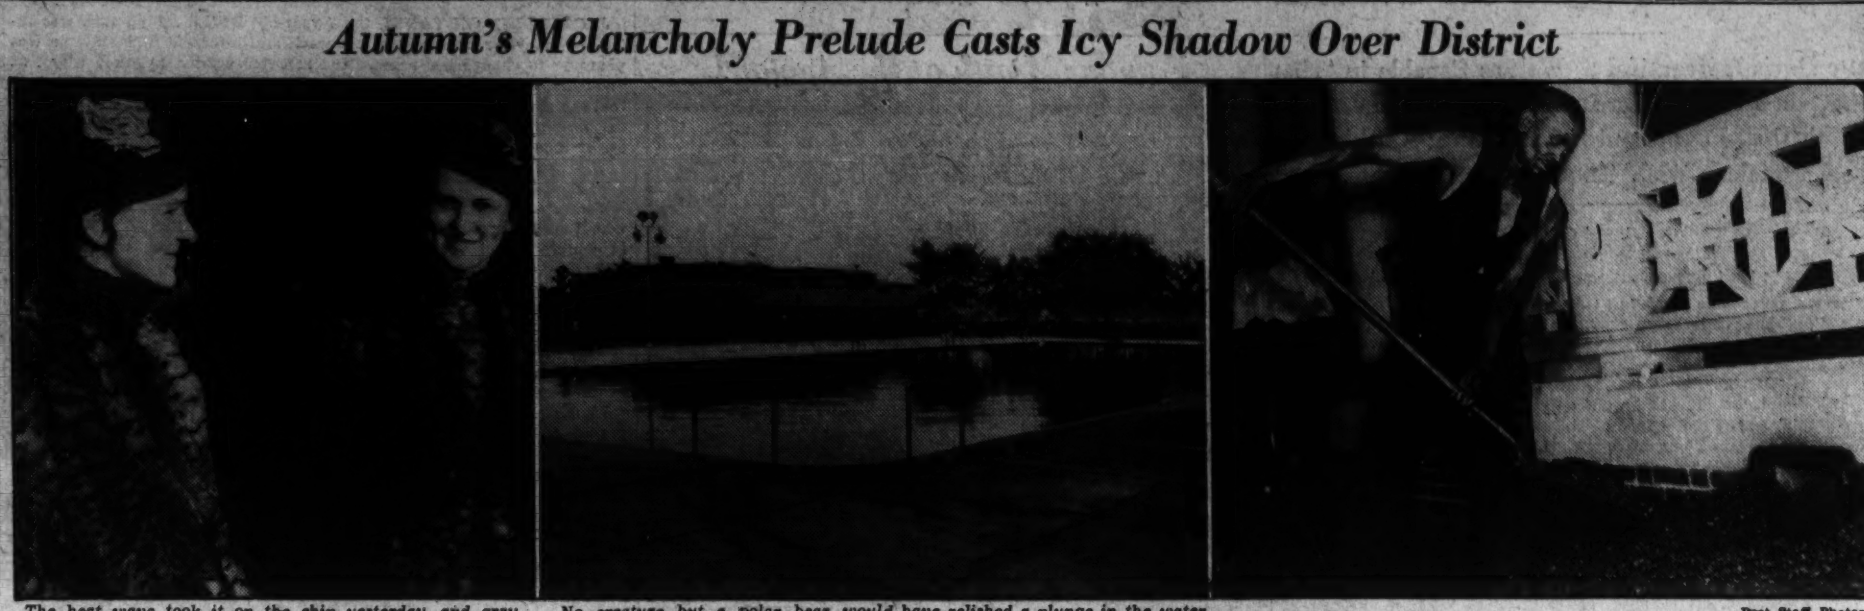

With additions to the inspection staff in prospect, a marked improvement in the restaurant problem here was forecast yesterday by Dr. R. R. Ashworth, director of food inspection service, in announcing that 26,000 inspections were made by three men last year. That represented an increase of 10,000 inspections over the 1936 figure, he said.

"Our trouble is not with the restaurant operator who knows his business, but rather with the restaurant operator in Washington who is inadequately prepared for the business," Dr. Ashworth said.

Sponsors Invited To Health Camp

Bald Eagle Health Camp, operated by the District Tuberculosis Association, will be opened for inspection by persons who contributed to its support next Monday at 3 p. m. It was announced yesterday by Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director.

Health of the 125 children in the camp is improving remarkably, she declared.

The heat wave took it on the chin yesterday, and gray skies, stiff winds and occasional rain made summertime seem a memory. Here is Miss Josephine Kaczanowski taking advantage of the snappy weather to try on a fur coat at a downtown furrier's shop.

30-Day Extension Of Business Tax Deadline Urged

Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen yesterday recommended a 30-day extension of the deadline for the payment of the new business privilege tax, now fixed at September 16.

Palmisano Gets 10 Objections To New Court

Measure Creating Small Claims Tribunal Tabled by Congress

Commissioner Hazen yesterday forwarded to Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, a memorandum outlining 10 objections made by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal to the small claims court bill, tabled in Congress haste to adjourn.

In his memorandum, Seal said: "If such a bill is enacted into law, it is wise to call attention to the increased cost of administration incident thereto. Undoubtedly, the paper work would require an additional clerk, the forms, including printing to be provided by the court for the convenience of litigants, would be a considerable item, and it is estimated the additional cost would be between $5,000 and $10,000."

"In conclusion, it is desired to call attention to the fact that the Municipal Court, as it exists today, is a small claims court and, further, that for more than 15 years it has not been necessary for an indigent person to file an oath in forma pauperis before suit is begun. This practice has not related entirely to small claims and has extended to all character of claims and to the full jurisdictional amount."

Dealing with the section of the bill giving the court power to bring before it once every four weeks for examination persons involved in litigation, Seal said: "There is a grave possibility that this process would be abused by installment houses for the purpose of harassing the poor and indigent. Rather than being a help, such a provision would be a hindrance to poor or indigent persons."

One of the foremost protagonists of the bill is Judge Nathan Cayton, of the Municipal Court.

Bruno Returned to Cell

Philadelphia, Aug. 23 (AP).—Joseph J. Bruno, 32-year-old former Republican boss, of Kelayres, Pa., was returned to a penitentiary cell today to resume serving three life sentences interrupted by an eight-month flight from justice. He was captured in New York yesterday.

3 More Seized In Capital Drug Theft Roundup

Nine Men Deny Charges of Conspiracy, Receiving Stolen Goods

Three additional arrests were made yesterday in connection with an alleged "gang" held for handling stolen products from the Washington Wholesale Drug Exchange.

Those taken all were druggists, and charged with receiving stolen property. They were released under $1,000 bond each.

Arrested were Benjamin Bass, 30, of the 1600 block of Connecticut avenue; Oscar Bassacches, 35, of the 7100 block of Ninth street northwest; and Nathaniel Johnson, 22, colored, of the 600 block of Third street northeast.

Nine Plead Not Guilty

Meanwhile, nine men, five of them employees of the Washington Wholesale Drug Exchange, and the others druggists, arrested Sunday night, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Police Judge John P. McMahon on charges of conspiracy and receiving stolen goods in connection with the alleged theft and sale of the stolen, allegedly stolen in the last three years.

A continuance until September 10 was permitted by Judge McMahon, at the request of the district attorney's office. This continuance was granted while the search for other persons implicated in the alleged thefts continued.

Charged with conspiracy were John R. Gordon, 26, of the 1500 block of D street southeast, a shipping clerk; Norman Leroy Slater, 35, of Savage, Md.; Charles W. Turner, 27, of the 1400 block of Good Hope road southeast; Philip N. Newby, 45, of Hyattsville, Md.; and Jesse F. Piper, 25, of the 300 block of Thirteenth street southeast. Each was released on $500 bond.

Druggists arraigned, all on charges of receiving stolen goods, were George W. Beasley, 36, colored, of the 1100 block of Irving street; Simon Kessler, 67, of the 600 block of Keeler place; Max Kossow, 36, of the 5500 block of Second street, and Charles M. Brown, 43, colored, of the 4400 block of Sherrier road northeast. Each was released under $1,000 bond.

Road Contractor Killed

Havre De Grace, Md., Aug. 23 (AP). An automobile accident today cost the life of Alfred G. Schiavi, member of a Wilmington, Del., contracting firm, near section of the new Philadelphia-Baltimore road which Schiavi's firm is building.

Stephen Foster Coins Sell High At Auction for U. S. Collectors

Group of Three Struck Last Year Brings Highest Price as Numismatists Bid for Rare Specimens at Convention

A set of three half-dollars, struck last year to mark the Stephen Foster centennial and known as the Cincinnati commemorative set, brought the highest price at an auction sale held last night in conjunction with the convention of the American Numismatic Society at the Hotel Washington.

The set went to Carl Ritali, a private collector from Fairport, Ohio. He paid $23 for the coins, one of which was struck at the San Francisco mint, another at the Denver mint and another at Philadelphia.

Urged on by the cry of licensed Auctioneer Charles Cohen, "They're scarce, I'm telling you," the numismatists bid spiritedly on coins from Borneo, Cyprus, ancient Rome, and, most heavily perhaps, on those of the United States.

Most in demand next to the United States coins seemed to be English specimens minted during the brief reign of Edward VIII. The collectors believe that these will some day attain great value, although prices paid for them last night were not great.

Police Hold Man As 'Petting Bandit' Of Lovers' Lane

A man believed by police to be Washington's "petting bandit," responsible for a series of robberies in the lovers' lane section of West Virginia avenue during the past few weeks, was being held last night for a headquarters line-up.

The man, giving the name of Edward Colles, 27, of the 2100 block of Tenth street northwest, was arrested by Detective George Thornton last night when, according to Thornton, he jumped on the running board of a parked car.

According to Thornton, a revolver and several watches were found on the prisoner.

Sir Ronald Asked To Richmond Fete

Richmond, Va., Aug. 23 (AP).—Mayor J. Fulmer Bright dispatched an invitation today to Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador to the United States, to participate in the Richmond bicentennial's "mother country day" on September 22.

Officials also announced an effort would be made to obtain a British destroyer to anchor in the Richmond Harbor during that day, which will be featured by the unveiling of a tablet at the city hall commemorating the naming of Richmond after Richmond-on-Thames.

Reynolds Willing To Be G.O.P. Entry

Callands, Va., Aug. 23 (AP).—Dr. S. A. Reynolds, prominent Pennsylvania County physician mentioned as the possible Republican nominee for Governor, said today he would carry the party banner against James H. Price, Democratic nominee, if nominated at the Republican convention at Richmond on August 26.

While he has not yet been approached by party leaders, Dr. Reynolds said he knows that his name has been mentioned.

Coughlin Takes Holiday

Detroit, Aug. 23 (AP).—Father Charles E. Coughlin began a vacation today, necessitated, an assistant said, by nervous indigestion, which forced him to curtail a sermon before an audience of 4,000 persons yesterday.

Hazen Desires Early Start on Wharf Works

Commissioner Hopes War Department Will Rush Channel Project

Immediate construction of wharves at Water street and improvement of the Washington channel was advocated yesterday by District officials.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said he hoped the War Department would begin construction "as soon as possible."

He said the Budget Bureau notified the Commissioners it would approve an appropriation of $68,000 at the next session of Congress as the District's first payment on its share of the cost.

Congress has given the War Department $234,000,000 for improvement of rivers and harbors throughout the country, chiefly at the discretion of Maj. Gen. E. M. Markham. The local project was estimated in 1933 to cost $1,850,000, over an eight-year period, with the District contributing $380,000 as its share.

The waterfront project calls for (1) a yacht harbor, with space for 286 boats; (2) two municipal wharves; (3) three wharves for transportation lines and general service; (4) bulkhead walls, and (5) removal of old structures.

Gwathmey Drowns On Pleasure Trip

West Point, Va., Aug. 23 (AP).—Bill Gwathmey, formerly owned by the Detroit Tigers in the American League and well known in semi-pro baseball circles of Virginia, was drowned in the Pamunkey River Sunday.

Gwathmey was a member of a party of about 25 returning to West Point after a pleasure trip up the river. Witnesses said Gwathmey apparently lost his balance and fell into the river just off Romancock Plantation, about 5 miles from here.

Gwathmey formerly managed the Chesapeake Baseball Club of West Point. After being bought by Detroit he was farmed out to the minor leagues. At various times he had played with the Board of Atlantic, International and other leagues.

Delinquent Taxpayers Warned at Cumberland

Cumberland, Aug. 23 (AP).—Mayor Thomas W. Koon today gave the city council a blunt warning that municipal spending must be curtailed until tax collections and water rental revenues show a substantial increase.

He said the collector's office should take prompt action to get in taxes and water rentals overdue, adding that they need not wait for council action since the collector now has the authority to demand payment.

W. L. Houston, Educator, Named Assistant to Attorney General

William L. Houston, former member of the Board of Education, became Special Assistant to the Attorney General yesterday. He is the father of Charles H. Houston, also a former member of the Board of Education, and now counsel for the National Association for Advancement of Colored People.

The new appointee is a graduate of the Howard University school of law, and taught there 15 years. He was in charge of the colored speakers bureau in the 1936 campaign, for the Eastern division, is a member of the National Lawyers Guild, president of the Washington Bar Association, and was recently elected president of the National Bar Association, composed of colored attorneys.

Police Hunt 5 Men Who Slew 2 Pigs, Pets at Aged Home

Two little pigs, in the woods near the Blue Plains Home for the Aged, were "put on the spot" yesterday by five men who shot them to death and fled in an automobile.

Inmates told police of hearing shots and squeals and seeing the men drive off.

The victims, "Lee" and "Charley," belonged to the home. Police broadcast a lookout for the killers.

Police Hold 9, Fearing Man in River Was Slain

Michael J. Miller, 58, Dead; Merry-makers From Houseboat Quizzed

Police held nine persons last night pending determination whether Michael J. Miller, 58-year-old service operator at the District sewage plant, was killed and thrown overboard at the height of a gay party on a houseboat.

Miller's body was found in the Anacostia River yesterday. He vanished Saturday night, and his relatives asked police to find him. Two of those held were women.

Police said they had learned there had been considerable drinking aboard the boat, and that Miller might have been shoved overboard in a row. Those on the boat claimed the last they saw of Miller was about sundown Saturday and that they thought he went home.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald will conduct an autopsy today. He withheld his verdict last night.

U. F. W. to Mark Rights Restoration

Calling for recognition of the Lloyd-La Follette act, Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers of America, yesterday issued a statement to Government employees requesting commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the passage of the bill today.

Claiming that the act had restored a right of civic action to Government workers, Baker said the fundamental rights of Government employees have been securely established, but "not so securely that apathy might not threaten these fundamental rights again."

Advertising Club Fete For Donald Bernard

Donald Bernard, business manager of The Post, will be feted at a birthday party today at 12:30 p. m. in the Raleigh Hotel by the Advertising Club of Washington.

Accidents Kill 2, Injure 20 In D. C. Area

Fairfax Woman Fatally Hurt by Auto-Trailer at Falls Church

Oakton, Va., Man Victim of Hit-and-Run Motorist

Two persons were fatally injured in automobile accidents in nearby Virginia yesterday and more than a score were injured in the District as wet streets menaced driving.

The dead are Mrs. A. J. Webb, 809 West Broad street, Fairfax, Va., and William E. Kenyon, 38, Oakton, Va. While crossing the Arlington-Fairfax Railroad tracks in West Falls Church, Mrs. Webb was killed when struck by an auto-trailer, a vehicle built for traveling either on railroad tracks or road.

The driver of the vehicle, police said, was Harry Finnell, 1016 North Quincy street, Ballston, Va. No charge was placed against him.

Mrs. Webb was the wife of a Commerce Department employee. Kenyon was killed when struck by a hit-and-run motorist while repairing a flat tire on Lee highway.

Two Seriously Hurt. Two persons were injured seriously and one slightly hurt in an automobile accident at Millwood, Md., on the Marlboro pike. Manuel Gerasis, 35, 1734 Allison street northwest, suffered lacerations. Catherine Gerasis, 32, fracture of collarbone, and Sophia Rois, 28, of the Allison street address, concussion and lacerations. They were carried to Casualty Hospital by the Prince Georges County rescue squad.

Three persons were injured in a collision on the Lee highway about 5 miles west of Fairfax. The injured were Mr. and Mrs. Edwin R. Wilson, 1220 D street northeast, who were treated at Emergency Hospital, and Francis Dobo, 26, Astoria, N.Y., treated for a fractured kneecap.

Hit-and-Run Accident. James Cox, 51, colored, 1756 T street northwest and Irene Middleton, 46, colored, were injured in a hit-and-run collision at New York avenue and Sixth street northwest.

Winton Edwards, 32, of White Oaks, Md., received a possible skull fracture, concussion and severe cuts in an accident on the Baltimore highway. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated John K. Shoemaker, 23, of 103 Concord avenue northwest, in the traffic death of 4-year-old Audrey Ann Holland, 242 Jefferson street northwest.

The girl was injured Thursday and died Saturday in Emergency Hospital.

Would-Be Bride, 13, Is Detained Here

Nadine Vandergrift, the 13-year-old girl who disappeared from her home in the 5000 block Sheridan place northwest last Saturday, was found yesterday by Private D. O. Fletcher, of the Seventh Precinct.

The child, according to the police, was walking on Conduit road with a boy who told the officer: "We were going to get married."

Two weeks ago the girl disappeared, but was returned to her parents four days later when she was recognized by friends on a downtown street. She is being held at the Receiving Home and her 18-year-old companion at the Seventh Precinct.

Disposes of Bear Coll Box Through Post Want Ad

BEAR COLL BOX, with 180 ft. of coll; also rollers, chaps. 3524 Georgia ave., Columbia 10138.

This is one bear coll box that didn't stay in the collar. When Mrs. Arthur Gausch, of Georgia Avenue, decided that she didn't have any further use for it, she inserted a small ad in The Post's Miscellaneous for Sale column, where hundreds of such bargains are sold. Promptly she found a buyer for the bear coll box.

Regardless of what you want to sell, a Post Want Ad can sell most anything. The cost is only 54 cents for a 3-line ad. Call

Post Notes on FISHING

By Bill Ackerman.

Mr. U. E. Blair, Department of Justice, reports the presence late Sunday afternoon in the section around Tall Timbers of large shoals of weakfish. Plenty of them being caught, but only by trolling.

A bill that is of interest to every sportsman in the country was passed during the closing hours of the House last week. Two weeks previous it passed the Senate and there is little doubt but what it will be signed and become a law.

The Pittman-Robertson bill, or the Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration Act, puts an end to the diversion of the excise tax, levied on arms and ammunition, into the general fund of the United States.

Instead, the money is being spent for the benefit of sportsmen, where it most needs to be. The bill provides that $3,000,000 a year for wildlife conservation will not cost the sportsman one penny more in taxes than what he is paying now.

The only possible complaint could come from State politicians who have been diverting these moneys into channels completely at variance with projects that might in any way resemble conservation.

The Piney Point section seems to have as much to offer in size and variety as any place we know of. Just below in the mouth of the Potomac that large shoal of blues is rising every day, even though there are very few fish being taken from it, but it can't be many days before there will be plenty of action from it. Plenty of hardheads and Norfolk spook as well as pan rock, the latter caught by trolling and running in weight up to five pounds.

This column, for parties fishing Piney Point, has always liked to recommend Capt. L. M. Spriggs, but because he was always busy, found it necessary to let another take our suggestion he has made arrangements with several other reliable boatmen to work with him so that a call to Capt. Spriggs or Mills 9-F-15 will be all that will be necessary to get a boat in the future.

One of the ponds on the middle grounds between West River and South River, probably better known to most as the Three Sisters, has been in one day more than 3 tons of rock, and the fact that they are here in these waters, yet the few caught each day by hook and line fishermen can be counted on the fingers of one hand.

On Saturday and Sunday, with upward of 100 boats fishing the section between Holland Point and Thomas Point, there still was no catch of this desirable fish. Why is more than we can say, unless it is the nearness of easterly weather.

Holland Point Bar, ordinarily the best weakfishing in the upper bay, was fished on Sunday from one end to the other and the result was exactly nothing, but when the wind comes and we are going right back and give it another try.

Several weeks ago John C. Huntington, president of the More Game Foundation, filed charges with the Congressional Committee on Conservation of Natural Resources that the United States Bureau of Biological Survey is making "arbitrary and bureaucratic misuse" of authority in "ignoring recommendations" of State game officials in prescribing Federal hunting regulations.

He suggested an amendment to the Federal migratory bird law making consultation with the States mandatory.

Was that the reason Secretary Wallace, last week, approved the plan to obtain greater participation of State game officials in matters affecting migratory bird protection? According to the plan, advanced by Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the Biological Survey, and already endorsed by a majority of the State commissioners, representatives of the States will meet annually with Federal wildlife officials to discuss conditions affecting migratory game birds and their protection.

Throughout the year the survey plans to forward to the State officials data collected by bureau naturalists and information on problems as they arise. Regional meetings will also permit further consultations.

The Biological Survey hopes that these conferences will result in closer co-operation than now exists between Federal and State officials responsible for wild-life administration.

There is hardly any doubt but what it will, for after all, the individual State has some right to sit on a deliberative body that affect conditions within its borders.

Sandlot Pick-ups By Jack Munhall.

In his first year as athletic director for the newly organized Colmar Manor Boys Club of Bladensburg, the newest of the fine institutions, MIKE MULLIGAN has wrought unlimited good among the youngsters in that vicinity. The civic leader and parents are rapidly taking further and more widespread appreciation of the great advantages afforded youth by boys clubs and the citizens around Bladensburg do not lack in foresight.

MULLIGAN has moulded a capable ball nine since the club first breathed life in early June and his team, ranging in age from 11-14, which placed in the junior class, has taken 11 victories in 19 starts. MULLIGAN, looking ahead, anticipating increased membership in the now-growing club, is planning to form a baseball league next summer which he desires to affiliate with the successful National City League of this city. According to the youthful director there are enough teams in his neighborhood to make up a league. He numbered Riverdale, A. C. and the Citizens around Bladensburg do not lack in foresight.

Radio and Baseball; Bum Never Bum

By Shirley Povich.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 23.

Happily wedded now are radio and big league baseball, but time was when they were highly incompatible with the big leagues, living in deadly fear of the inroads of broadcasting.

That was before the majors took their complaint to the high courts and were given complete jurisdiction over who was to broadcast their games and how.

In certain cities, certain stations were broadcasting the games without paying the club owners for the privilege. It was called "bum never bum."

Club owners are now selling the radio rights to the games for a fat rate. Clark Griffith nets $20,000 for broadcasting privileges, and the Chicago Cubs are paid $15,000 for home games.

The stations, of course, do not take the rap for the cost of radio privileges. The cost is passed on to program sponsors who are now engaging in lively bidding for the rights to advertise their products in connection with big league ball games.

But very careful are the big leagues as to who broadcasts the games and how. They reserve the right to approve of the men who handle the microphone at the games.

Thus woe to any broadcaster who criticizes the umpires or otherwise tends to incite dissatisfaction among the fans. The men at the microphone are under a strict censorship and may be discharged at will if the league deems their broadcasts inimical to its interest.

The wonder is that Washington's Arch McDonald has not fallen foul of league officials for his scathing criticism of the WFSB announcer's handling of the games.

Even so outstanding a radio figure as Ted Husing was barred from further broadcasts by the club owners. Husing was barred from broadcasting ball games for nearly ten years because of one incident that happened in Washington and not until last season did the American League relent and permit him to broadcast again.

Husing was at the microphone in Griffith Stadium during an opening game along about 1927 or '28 and told his listeners that Umpire George Moriarty reversed a decision at second base, which was the truth of the matter. A friend of Moriarty's advised the umpire of Husing's comment and Moriarty reported Husing to the league president.

Without a hearing, and on the strength only of the umpire's report, Husing was barred from further broadcasts. Baseball doesn't want its umpires second-guessed. In fact, baseball doesn't want dissatisfaction with the game expressed in any way. Baseball is the absolute boss in this marriage of baseball and radio and as long as the idea is making money for both, radio is content to have it that way.

Legless Man Tries to Swim—From Albany to Broadway

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Forty-three-year-old Charles Zimny, legless since he was nine, smeared himself with 30 pounds of grease tonight and, puffing a cigar, plunged into the Hudson on a 143-mile nonstop swim to New York City.

Zimny, whose legs were severed in a Chicago street car accident, dropped into the unruly Hudson at 6:11 p. m., vowing he would remain in the water until he reached New York City, probably Saturday afternoon.

He weighed 170 pounds when he began the tortuous trip, but expected to lose at least 50 before he reaches his destination.

"Well, I'll see you near the Great White Way Saturday evening if everything goes well," he shouted to the crowd as he pulled out into the stream.

Zimny said "nothing can stop me from reaching my destination, except heavy storms or a sudden illness." He plunged into the water with an empty stomach, having eaten his last meal last night.

He explained that he would sleep and eat in the water, floating on his back. He planned to do most of his sleeping during the day. The temperature of the water is better for swimming at night.

"You can't tell," he said. "I may take a nap a few hours after I get down the river. I've simply got to have my sleep."

A small rowboat preceded Zimny, while a yacht, carrying supplies, trailed several hundred yards back. The rowboat, manned by two youths, will guide the swimmer.

Zimny's swim will be against an ocean tide much of the way. He said he expected to make a half-mile an hour against the tide and three miles an hour with it.

"I probably will lose mileage—actually be treading water—when the tide is at its highest against me," he said.

Shortly before he began the trip, Zimny said the first 30 hours of the swim "are the hardest."

"After I've been in the water 30 hours, I can stay a month," he smiled.

Douglas L. Howard Honored by Navy

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 23 (AP).—Dedication of a new gold trophy to the memory of the late Capt. Douglas Legate Howard, U. S. N. (retired), was announced today by Lieut. C. W. Humphreys, U. S. N., chairman of the tournament committee of the Naval Academy Golf Club.

Lieut. Humphreys said that the Navy Athletic Association, through Capt. Robert C. Giffen, U. S. N., contributed a silver cup.

The first tournament for the honor of having an officer's name inscribed on the cup will begin tomorrow.

Capt. Howard was an outstanding academy athlete while a midshipman. He later served as director of athletics and football coach at the academy and as dean of St. John's College.

Keeps Trap Crown, Hits 325 in Row

Jones Loses One Title, Despite Perfect Score, on Flip of Coin.

By the Associated Press.

Vandalia, Ohio, Aug. 23.—Hale C. Jones, of Wood River, Ill., giving one of the greatest trapshooting exhibitions of his career, broke 325 targets without a miss from the 16-yard line as the thirty-eighth Grand American program opened today, and retained his "champion of champions" title in a race with 31 other State champs.

Jones, 30-year-old automobile salesman, broke 200 in a row to tie for the Class AA laurels, and then cracked another 100 to tie with three other State title-holders in the championship of champions race.

In the shoot-off he broke 25 more without a miss to take the honors as the three other top-notchers faltered.

Tied with Jones in the 100-target championship race, No. 1 event on the day's program, were E. M. Stevenson, of Fort Smith, Ark.; Dr. N. G. Riggins, of Hazard, Ky.; and R. Hemmick, of Reading, Pa. In the shoot-off Dr. Riggins and Hemmick broke 22 of 25, while Stevenson crumbled 21.

Dr. Riggins won second place by defeating Hemmick in an extra 75-target shoot-off. Both broke 25 in the second set, but Dr. Riggins missed once on the last 25 while the Kentuckian was "straight."

Jones had but one tough break. He tied with Tommy Lovett, of Houston, Tex., with 200 of 200 for the Class AA laurels and then lost the flip of a coin for the medal.

That was the only thing he missed all day.

Other class titles and the winning scores were:

Class A—H. R. Hoon, of Jewell, Iowa, 199 of 200.

Class B—W. Winteringham, of Barrington, Ill., 200 of 200.

Class C—F. J. Snider, Dayton, Ohio, 199 of 200.

Class D—Everett T. Addy, Springfield, Ohio, 191 of 200.

Football 'De-Emphasis' Hits Emory and Henry

Emory, Va., Aug. 23 (AP).—A program of football "de-emphasis" at Emory and Henry may blunt chances of a winning Wap eleven this season, Coach W. L. (Billy) Laval said today.

At the home of consistently good grid squads for the past decade, Coach Laval reported that 20 football prospects had dropped out of school since last December and that freshman material was so scarce no first-year schedule was arranged for this fall.

MONTANEZ BEATS MASSEY. Philadelphia (AP).—Pedro Montanez, hard-hitting Puerto Rican lightweight, strengthened his bid for a shot at Champion Loum, whom he has won sensational technical knockout tonight over Philadelphia's Law Massey in a scheduled ten-rounder at the Arena.

Recreational City Meet Now Booked Friday

Rain Delays Annual Event; Sherwood Playground in Favorite Role.

The city-wide public recreation track and field meet, banner event in the summer program for playgrounds and community centers in this sport, has been postponed from today until Friday because of the rain-soaked track at Central High Stadium. Some 72 recreational units will be represented when the first gun cracks opening the day-long program.

The strong Sherwood Playground team, coached by Joe Mitchell, is the favorite to retain its 1936 honors according to Richard S. Tennyson, assistant supervisor of playgrounds, who will act as general referee. Tennyson expects 2,000 boys, all ages and sizes, from every corner of the city, to enter the varied program of events.

The National Training School band will lend color to the occasion, which will be opened by the announcement of the playground olympic oath over the public address system to all contestants, who will stand at attention. Then will follow the parade of all playground and community center delegations around the circular track.

The city-wide girls' field day will be held on Thursday at Central.

Bob Burns Says—

I think the safest way to get in a fight down home is to call another man a liar. I remember one time, when a man called my Uncle Slug a liar, Uncle Slug not only had a fight with him, but he had the man arrested and brought up in court. The man got up on the witness stand and said, "Yes, I called him a liar and I can prove it!" And he did. When the case was over, the judge turned to Uncle Slug and says, "Why in the world did you go to all this trouble to bring this man to court, when you knew very well that he could prove that you had told a lie?" Uncle Slug says, "Well, even if I am a liar, I've got a right to be sensitive about it."

Janitor Claims He Slew Widow From Jealousy

Prosecutor Brands McAfee Story of Motive as a Lie or Ravings.

son's apartment and denied any knowledge of the crime throughout the first 14 hours of grilling. In the fifteenth hour he began to talk.

Most damaging evidence, Keck said, was a spotlessly clean furnace shaker on the furnace, which was covered with dust. Subsequently, detectives found human hair in a basement sink drain and said they found blood on the janitor's pants.

Motive for the slaying was jealousy, Keck said. The colored man claimed he resented the fact Mrs. Anderson entertained numerous admirers. Sunday afternoon McAfee tried to dissuade one of her callers from visiting her by telling the visitor she was not at home. This police verified.

Keck Believes Story.

This entire tale, as related in the confession, Garnett regarded as fiction, he said. He could not believe that McAfee had any ground for jealousy.

Capt. Keck, however, insisted he was satisfied with the truth of the confession, and the detective also was satisfied as to McAfee's sanity.

"The background of this case is sickening," Keck declared. "As to McAfee's sanity, there's no doubt of it. He is a man of average intelligence, witty and boastful. He's a regular braggart."

"We have a clear first-degree murder case," he said. "The room both had been drinking. They had an argument. He left, went downstairs, got the furnace shaker and calmly returned to the room to kill her. It was not a crime of sudden passion."

"After he killed her, he returned to the basement and washed the furnace shaker with kerosene and soap and water. He also washed his hands. He apparently did not know there was a blood spot on his trousers, for no attempt had been made to remove it. He put the shaker back on the furnace."

"He got the idea for using the shaker from the murder of Mrs. Florence Goodwin, who was killed by a friend of his less than a block away last September. McAfee was a state's witness in that case."

Keck said that blood was found on an ice pick in the kitchen, 15 feet from the body. The detective declared the janitor said in his confession Mrs. Anderson had threatened him with the ice pick.

Keck Did Not Fully Account for the blood on the ice pick. Police at first were quoted as saying the blood splattered onto the ice pick, but Keck connected this yesterday when he said he believed McAfee had gone into the kitchen after the slaying and with blood on his hands had lifted the ice pick.

With the blood on the ice pick not fully explained, and with Garnett questioning the veracity of the confession, it appeared last night chances for a conviction will depend on scientific reports as well as the confession, with an insanity issue likely to feature in future legal proceedings.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald will hold an inquest tomorrow morning at 11:30 at the District Morgue. His laboratory technicians were making a thorough study of the case, remaining at their microscopes until 4 a. m. yesterday morning and all day yesterday. A complete study of the body, with an autopsy, and a minute examination of clothing and the alleged death weapon were going forward swiftly.

McAfee was intoxicated when arrested. He parried questioning cleverly, Keck said, during the first part of the police grilling. Police did not use the third degree, Keck said. As the alcohol wore off and its effects began shaking the man, who was not allowed to sleep, he began to crack.

One falsehood on which he tripped was his statement he had known Mrs. Anderson two years. She had lived in the boarding house of which McAfee was janitor less than a year.

He also claimed to have killed a common law wife named Bessie Beal in 1925. Court records show Bessie Beal is alive and that McAfee shot her. He was acquitted of a charge of assault with a deadly weapon in Justice Stafford's court. The judge at that time accused all the witnesses of lying. A perjury charge was placed against Beal's wife.

Another falsehood which cropped up was McAfee's age. He first told police he was 70 and "an old man." A check-up yesterday showed he is 61, and appears much younger, being active and spry.

The body of Mrs. Anderson was taken to Chambers undertaking establishment last night. Arrangements for funeral services were not complete, but it was thought she would be buried in Arlington Cemetery beside her veteran husband.

Footsore Pickets Rest at U. S. Chamber of Commerce

would run between $50,000 and $60,000.

David Lasser, president, and Benjamin told how the 2,500 members camped on the golf course in West Potomac Park had been drenched by the rain, and how they had shivered because of inadequate shelter. But the marchers themselves made it clear that they did not want to go home.

"We'll stay here!" they yelled. They booed and hissed the name of Gen. Hugh Johnson because of an attack the former NRA chief made on Lasser in his newspaper column. He said Lasser would like nothing better than to have Washington policemen attack his marchers.

They booed and hissed again when Lasser tore into the "reactionaries, wolves of economy and Lord MacCauley's on Capitol Hill, but they cheered when Lasser mentioned the name of C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis, and endorsed his recent attack on the Democratic Party in Congress.

Hopkins Refuses Demand.

Lasser told the mass meeting that Harry L. Hopkins, WPA head, had refused their demand for the reinstatement of discharged WPA workers.

It was with a hope of lobbying through Congress a bill providing for such reinstatement that the "job march" was organized. But Congress adjourned sooner than was expected, leaving only the police, the guides and a few clerks in the Capitol. Nevertheless, the marchers will assemble at 11 o'clock this morning and parade to the Hill, thus emphasizing—as Lasser put it last night—that "Congress had no right to run away from so many pressing problems."

Representative H. Jerry Voorhees (Democrat), California, was one of the speakers at the meeting. He said his efforts to get through legislation for the jobless. He said that ultimately the Federal Government would have to provide jobs for people, not by borrowing money, but by raising taxes.

Former WPA Musicians Play.

A 60-piece band, made up of musicians who had been let out by WPA, gave a concert that was applauded lustily by the marchers. Led by Chester Smith, once leader of the New York Police Department Band, the musicians played an overture by Von Suppe and "The Student Prince," by Sigmund Romberg.

Earlier in the day, Administrator Hopkins had told the delegation of marchers: "I can't put these people back to work—it is impossible to give you any assurance that your demands will be met."

In the conference with Hopkins, Lasser and other spokesmen for the group asked for re-employment of approximately 450,000 discharged WPA workers and urged that persons formerly on WPA rolls be given preference over newcomers. The latter demand also was refused by Hopkins.

Picket U. S. Chamber.

Earlier in the day nearly the entire "job marchers" encampment in West Potomac Park moved to the United States Chamber of Commerce, where a picket line paraded and chanted demands for an hour. Re-enforced police details, armed with gas bombs and night sticks, adopted a policy of "watchful waiting." Rush hour traffic was disrupted as police escorts attempted to pass the marchers across congested downtown intersections.

As additional marchers arrived from Midwestern and New England points, tents sprung up along the river banks near the Lincoln Memorial. Nearly 100 tents were hastily erected on the rain-soaked grounds. Lasser said he "had no idea" where the tents came from. City and park authorities denied furnishing the marchers with housing facilities.

Mrs. McReynolds returned Sunday from Lake Chautauque, N. Y., where she spoke on "Sky High Beyond the Equator."

Quantico Ranks Sgt. Dorsey As Best in Camp

Daughters of 1812 Medal Goes to Marine Who Also Won D. A. R. Prize.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Quantico, Va., Aug. 23.—Sgt. Theodore P. Dorsey, of A Company, Fifth Battalion, Fleet Marine Corps Reserve, today won the Jeanne Fox Weinman Daughters of 1812 Medal for the best all-around Marine in camp here.

On the point scoring system assigned by the major general commandant of the Marine Corps, Dorsey was credited with 20 points for attendance at camp, 20 points for drill, 10 points for leading the enlisted men of the battalion in correspondence courses and 10 points for general activity in the interest of the Marine Corps.

Dorsey had already won the Ruth Brewster Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution Medal for progress in correspondence courses. Second place for the Daughters of 1812 Medal was won by Sgt. Douglas E. Studdiford, of Company C, winner of the 1812 medal last year. Third place went to Sgt. Raymond J. Bogk, of B Company.

The medal will be formally presented at parade on Saturday by Mrs. Nannie Francesco Porter, of Richmond, secretary national of the Daughters of 1812.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars Medal to the best drilled private or private first class, which will be formally presented here on Saturday by Department Commander Dave Herman, was won by Private J. M. Langan, of C Company, University of Maryland student and former Central High School cadet.

Second place in the V. F. W. competition went to Private Joseph J. Ludwig, of Headquarters Company, and third place to Private First Class P. C. Spivey. Both Spivey and Ludwig are regular Marines.

In announcing the awards Maj. Eugene F. C. Collier said both contests were unusually close.

The board of observers will tomorrow conclude the competitive rifle inspection of each of the seven line companies. All awards won count as points toward the Edmonds General Efficiency Cup, which will be presented on Saturday by Col. William P. Upshur, U. S. M. C., director of the Marine Corps Reserve.

Campaign On for Restoration Of 176-Year-Old St. Andrew's

Southern Maryland Gentlemen Arranged in 1761 for Building of Church; Funds Asked to Repair Rotted Roof.

At a vestry meeting at the Glebe in St. Andrew's Parish on April 17, 1761, a group of Southern Maryland gentlemen—Gov. George Plater among them—voted 200,000 pounds of tobacco toward construction of a new church that would have fluted and capped pillars and "isles laid with flag stones."

The pews would have wainscoted doors and the "handsome altar piece be of the Ionick Order." The church would be known as St. Andrews. Services were started in the new building around 1766 and have continued without interruption, although numerous "modern touches" added during the years have detracted from its original architectural perfection.

A campaign to raise funds to restore the church and "repair its roof before it falls in" was opened yesterday by Mrs. Samuel West Russell, member of the restoration committee appointed recently by Bishop James E. Freeman.

According to estimates made by Delos H. Smith, Washington architect, approximately $10,000 will make the needed repairs.

Divorce Granted For Helen Wills In Private Trial

Carson City, Nev., Aug. 23 (AP).—Helen Wills Moody, who reigned as queen of world tennis for more than half of her 30 years, divorced Frederick S. Moody, Jr., San Francisco broker, today in a brief, private trial. She charged mental cruelty.

Mrs. Moody announced she would virtually desert tennis to play golf and design links costumes.

7,000 Stings Fatal To Boy, 6, as Bees Attack Brothers

Lander, Wyo., Aug. 23 (AP).—His face and body swollen beyond recognition from stings of thousands of angry honey bees, 6-year-old Clifford Fabricius died today.

The boy was found, screaming with pain, near his farm home at Hudson after his hysterical 10-year-old brother, Harry, had staggered into the house.

Alex Fabricius, father of the boys, said "thousands of bees" from a nearby apiary were swarming over Clifford. A Riverton physician removed 2,000 stings from his body. "In serious condition from numerous stings himself, the older brother was unable to explain the attack."

WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

No matter how much your back aches and your head throbs, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month. Too often the honeymoon express is wrecked by the nagging tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward signs that she is a victim of periodic pain. For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three eras of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and go "smiling through."

Fair Scheduled For Tomorrow At Floris, Va.

Cattle and Produce Judging to Be Followed by Riding, Dance.

The third annual fair of the Community Fair Association, at Floris, Va., will be held tomorrow beginning at 10 a. m., on the grounds of the Floris Elementary School near Herndon, Va.
